DEATH OF NOTED BAY STATE MAN

Charles Francis Adams of Boston, South Lincoln and Washington, member of the presidential Adams family, railroad executive, historian and Civil War General, died today at his Washington residence from grippe which developed from a cold recently contracted. He would have been eighty years old on May 27 next.

John Adams, one of his two sons, said:

"My father came into the State street office about March 8 and I saw him, off and on, until March 11, when he returned to Washington. He seemed then in the best of health. I do not think he had looked better for some time than he did then.

"The last time I received a letter from him was on March 17, when he wrote that he had a cold. The next I heard was today's telegram, announcing his death from grippe. I leave at once for Washington."

ANCESTORS PRESIDENTS.

Charles Francis Adams was a great-grandson of President John Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams and son of Charles Francis Adams, who was Minister to Great Britain in the Civil War. One of his greatest contributions to American literature was his biography of his father, containing a review of Civil War diplomacy.

Mr. Adams leaves a wife, formerly Miss Mary Hone Ogden of Newport; one brother, Henry Adams of Washington; a sister, Mrs. H. B. Quincy of Boston; three daughters and two sons. The daughters are: Mrs. Grafton St. L. Abbott of Concord, Mrs. T. Nelson Perkins of Norwood and Miss Elizabeth C. Adams of Washington and South Lincoln. The sons are John Adams and Henry Adams, 2d, both of Lincoln.

The Washington residence, where Mr. Adams died, is No. 1791 Massachusetts avenue, in the Capitol City. Mr. Adams had lived in Washington for the past six or seven years.

He was an overseer of Harvard University through two periods, 1852 to 1854, and 1895 to 1907. His death occurred on the birthday of President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, who was eighty-one years old today.

Mr. Adams was born in Boston on May 27, 1835. He was graduated from Harvard in 1856 and received the honorary degree of LL. D. in 1895.

Two years after being graduated from college Mr. Adams was admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

Mr. Adams served in the Union Army through the Civil War and was brevetted as Brigadier-General in May, 1865. He returned to civilian life and, on November 3, 1865, married Mary Ogden.

ACTIVE AS WRITER.

He became identified with railroad matters. He was appointed to the Board of Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners in 1869. In 1894 he was elected President of the Union Pacific Railway.

Mr. Adams made his home on the Adams estate in South Lincoln, maintained law offices at No. 23 Court street, city, and also kept a home in Washington.

He kept in close touch with town affairs in Lincoln and attended the last annual town meeting there on March 8. It was at that time that he spoke of his excellent health.

In his writings Mr. Adams drew much from his experiences in railroad management and in public life and also upon his great store of historical knowledge.

He wrote "Chapters on Erie and Other Essays," "Railroads, Their Origin and Problems," "Notes on Railroad Accidents," "Massachusetts, Its Historians and Its History," "Three Episodes of Massachusetts History," "Life of Charles Francis Adams" (his father) "Richard Henry Dana, a Biography," "A College Fetich," "Lee at Appomattox" and other papers and essays.

In 1895 he was elected president of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

He was a member of the Somerset Club of Boston, the Harvard and Knickerbocker Clubs of New York, and several historical, railroad and military organizations.

Betting Even War Will End By June 30

LONDON, March 20.—The betting at Lloyds was even money today that the war would be over by June 30, and odds of two to one that it would be over by September 1.

Fire Menaces Homes at Ashbury Grove

HAMILTON, March 20.—Ashbury Grove cottages were threatened today by fire which destroyed nearly all of the James Hughes dwelling on Hamilton avenue, 200 yards from the Grove. A high wind carried sparks inward the Grove cottages. Calls to Ipswich and Beverly brought motor engines. The burned property, according to a local real estate agent, was worth about $4,000. Most of the furniture was saved. A defective chimney is said to have caused the fire.

Will Give Hearings on Express Rates

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Formal orders reopening the express rate case, requested in the petition filed a few days ago by four of the principal express companies, were issued today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Hearings will be held at dates to be named later. Pending such hearings, however, no changes in rates may be made.

TODAY'S MARKET SUMMARY

Stocks were quiet at the opening. There was no change in sentiment over night. In trading circles there was satisfaction over the Interstate Commerce Commission decision to grant a hearing to the principal express companies of the United States upon their petition for higher rates.

At the opening in Boston Lake was up ¼ at 8⅝, United Fruit was unchanged at 120½, Granby was up ¼ at 69, North Butte was up ⅛ at 25⅛ and Isle Royale was up ⅛ at 22⅛.

In New York Reading was unchanged at 142⅝, Steel was up ⅛ at 64¼, Amalgamated was up ⅜ at 56⅝, Union Pacific was off ¼ at 120¼, and Utah was up ⅛ at 84⅝.

A letter from London states the betting at Lloyds is even money that the war will be over by June 30, and odds of two to one are offered that it will be over by September 1.

Bethlehem Steel advanced from 63¾ to 65 in the first fifteen minutes of trading in New York this morning. It is rumored a stock dividend is possible.

The New York cotton market was steady, with prices from 1 to 4 points lower. May wheat was up a point at the Chicago opening.

ORANGES TO CHEER OVER 5,000 TODAY

This was Orange Day.

Through the thoughtfulness and generosity of the members of the Massachusetts Women's Suffrage Association, hundreds of patients in the Boston hospitals were given oranges today.

Flower Days are well known, but Orange Day is a departure. Mrs. Ida M. Hebbard, chairman of the general committee, conceived the idea and the association boomed it with characteristic enthusiasm that spelled success from the start.

The oranges, in crates, were sent to the hospitals yesterday, and distribution began at 3 o'clock today. The general committee has arranged a chairman and committee for each hospital. These committees consist of six or eight suffragists.

5,000 WILL GET ORANGES.

The committees went to their respective hospitals in trolleys and automobiles. They each carried baskets which they filled from the crates. The committee members wore orange, symbolic of the day, and many suffrage sympathizers did likewise to show approval of the "Votes for Women" propaganda.

It expected that 5,000 patients would get oranges. Downtown stores have helped. Among the institutions visited by the suffragist orange squads the Boston City Hospital, Carney Hospital, Massachusetts General Hospital, Massachusetts Women's Hospital, Children's Hospital, Bo-

TURKS OFFICIALLY SAY TORPEDOES SANK ALLIES SHIPS

LONDON, March 20.—This evening's dispatches reviewing the disaster to the allies' fleet operating against the Dardanelles are regarded with great significance by naval experts here as indicating for the first time that submarines have been successfully employed in defence of the Turkish possessions.

The Turkish War Office officially announced that the three (and possibly four) allies' battleships which were sunk were torpedoed instead of being destroyed by floating mines as at first reported by the British Admiralty.

In this connection it is recalled that Austrian submarines were recently reported to have sailed for the Dardanelles, and now the Turkish War Office, officially reporting the sinking of the British battleships Africa and Irresistible and the French battleship Bouvet, makes the flat statement that the three vessels were torperoed.

While Constantinople was celebrating with wild rejoicing the Turkish successes against the invading fleet, from Petrograd comes a report that the Russian Black Sea fleet has appeared off the Bosphorus and is preparing to bombard Constantinople. Petrograd claims that the arrival of this enemy's squadron has transformed the Turks' festival of victory into panic and flight.

Despite the losses of the allies' fleet, it is now reported that six of the most powerful survivors of the great battle have re-entered the Dardanelles straits and resumed hostilities. Dispatches indicate that this failed to accomplish anything for the reason that the unfavorable weather conditions made successful operations impossible.

The statement from Turkish headquarters that the sinking of British and French warships in the Dardanelles was due to "torpedoes" adds:

"A hard seven-hour fight ended with success for our forts. Beyond slight damage to the earthworks, no damage was done the fortifications."

The London War Office claims that no attempt was made by the allied fleet to develop to the fullest extent its first general attack on the Dardanelles, when two thousand shells were fired in a six-hour bombardment designed to force a passage to Kilid Bahr and Chanak Kalessi.

It is now admitted by the British Admiralty that the Ocean, Irresistible and Bouvet were sunk and the Inflexible and Gaulois were damaged, and in addition is published the Turkish report that the British battleship Africa was also sunk.

Despite these losses, the allies, according to advices from Athens, are preparing to renew the attempt to force the Narrows, and with reinforcements in the shape of British and French warships now hurrying to the theatre of action are about to launch at the western approach to Constantinople the most desperate naval attack in modern history, while Russia, whose fleet, according to today's dispatches, has appeared at the eastern end of the Bosphorus, is about to lend her aid to the effort to open the straits and capture Constantinople.

ONLY SIXTY-FOUR SAVED FROM THE BOUVET.

Latest dispatches from Paris state that only sixty-four members of the crew of the French battleship Bouvet escaped death when the warship was sunk in the Dardanelles on Thursday. This became known today through an official statement issued by the French Ministry of Marine. The regular crew of the Bouvet numbered 621 men and unless this number had been increased for the Dardanelles operations, 557 perished. The Marine Minister's statement follows:

"Information received by the Minister of Marine makes known the important and brilliant part played by the French division in the battle of March 10 in the Dardanelles.

"It was our warships that had the honor of attacking the forts of the straits at short range. They performed this task with a vigor highly appreciated by the Englis headers in transmitting his report. Rear Admiral Gaspatis states that the banner of the flag was fully upheld. The number actually known of survivors of the Bouvet is sixty-four.

"The number killed and wounded on the other ships of the division is very small.

NEW SHIPS FOR THE ALLIES.

The British dreadnoughts Agincourt and Inflexible, and the French battleship Henry IV. are expected to join the allied fleets within the next forty-eight hours and take the places of the ships lost in Thursday's action.

It is believed that the French transports carrying the army of General D'Amade, which will cooperate with the British in land operations, have already reached the scene.

Reports of Turkish origin from Constantinople, via Berlin and Amsterdam, say that more than 750 French and British sailors perished in the attempt of the allied fleets to force the Narrows. The heaviest loss of life was attending the crew of the French battleship Bouvet, which battleship Irresistible, both of which were sunk. Fifty-two are reported to have been killed on the Inflexible. Total casualties on the French and British ships are placed at 1,900 by another dispatch.

TURKISH FIRE INCESSANT.

Fire from the Turkish batteries was uninterrupted and violent, according to information received from other sources. The crew of the French battleship Gaulois was touched by a mine, but the damage can be repaired in a few days. She left the Straits and anchored at the Island Navira.

The British battle cruiser Inflexible, which was hit on the bow by shells, also steamed out of the straits convoyed by two cruisers. A shell which exploded on her deck is reported to have killed forty men and wounded many others.

The irresistible did not sink for some time after the damages occurred which sent it to the bottom. This gave an opportunity for most of its crew of 750 men to be rescued, but many lost their lives when the ship took its final plunge.

Dispatches from Tenedos state that repairs are being rushed at full speed upon the French battleship Gaulois and the British dreadnought Inflexible whose forward control position was struck by a heavy shell.

A radiogram from Berlin quoted a Constantinople dispatch as saying that the British battleship Africa has been sunk by a mine or torpedo.

The Turkish fort, the name of which is not given, is said to have been seriously damaged, while many of the defenders were killed or wounded.

Important Turkish reinforcements have arrived to man the fortifications on the coast, and Gulf of Smyrna, according to dispatches from Mytilene. Engineers are hard at work repairing the forts damaged by the bombardment of the allied fleet. The Fort on Chatrash is reported to be undamaged. Mines will be placed in the vicinity of Chatrash and a few miles west of Smyrna. Searchlights from Turkish batteries illuminate the waters of the gulf and these along the coast, at night.

AMETHYST CUTS CABLE.

"The casualties reported successfully in the Straits of Dardanelles that were the result of a smart piece of work she performed in the Dardanelles when she was entrusted with the difficult task of cutting the telegraph cable connecting Kilid Buhr with Chanak" says the Malta correspondent of Reuter's.

The correspondent continues: "She succeeded in lifting and cutting the cable undetected and had started her return journey when she was discovered. She then had to run the gauntlet of fort after fort in the Narrows, becoming the target of a veritable hail of fire. Coming out safe and sound although frequently hit, she succeeded in getting beyond the range of the guns and approaching the entrance to the straits."

There was no official confirmation of this report up to the time the dispatch was written. In fact it was not even known that the Africa was sunk or damaged.

DISCREDIT CARDEN RUMOR.

A rumor was circulated to the effect that Vice-Admiral Sackville H. Carden, former commander of the latter international fleet, has been killed, but the information in the official dispatches seems to disprove this.

According to the rumor the British vice-admiral was killed when a shell hit the forward control position of the Inflexible, which occurred on Thursday. An official admiralty statement says that Carden was not in command of the fleet then, having been succeeded by Rear Admiral John Michael De Robeck on March 16, because of illness.

Counting such auxiliary craft as supply ships, hospital ships, mine sweepers, aviation station ships and transports, there will be more than one hundred ships in the great armada when the reinforcements arrive on the scene.

It is reported that the French Admiralty has sent a squadron to reinforce the fleet of Rear-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, which is lying off Smyrna.

BOMBARDMENT CONTINUES.

Late advices indicate that the bombarding tactics of the Turkish forts continues.

Several of the forts are reported silenced.

The town of Dardanelles is said to be in ruins.

The Turkish fleet was said to have emerged from the Bosporus to shell Russian troops but an dispatch today from Reuter's Petrograd correspondent declares:

"It is officially confirmed that a Russian squadron has approached the northern part of the Bosporus. The appearance of the squadron caused a great panic in Constantinople."

TURK JUBILANT.

Advices from Constantinople state that the Porte is celebrating today. The Turkish press prints long eulogies of the work of the Ottoman defenders of the Dardanelles. From Stamboul is say with fires. All desperation, evident here when it became known that the British fleet had been attacked, disappeared as soon as the magnitude of the Turkish victory became known.

According to the Turkish War Office the British battleship Africa was sunk with the Bouvet and Irresistible. The three ships, it says, were torpedoed. Earlier reports stated variously that the three warships were sent to the bottom by the Turkish batteries and mines.

The following official statement was issued today, additional details of the fleets' attack on Thursday and its repulse:

A fleet of sixteen ironclads including four British and three French battleships, destroyers and several torpedo boats and destroyers opened fire in the afternoon. A portion of the fleet retired at 3 p. m., but eight ironclads continued the bombardment until 6 o'clock when all withdrew with the exception of the French battleship Bouvet and the British ships Irresistible and Africa, which were torpedoed. Other ships were also hit hard.

The seven-hour fight ended with success for the forts. Only slight damage was done to the earthworks.

Turkish observers of the battle, it is thought, mistook the Ocean for the Africa. The British Admiralty admits the Ocean was sunk.

A Tenedos dispatch today says that six battleships re-entered the strait on Friday, but on account of the bad weather were unable to pursue operations. In the afternoon British destroyers took a number of bodies from the hospital ship and conveyed them out to sea, where they were buried with full military honors. While the burial ceremony was in progress the flags of the fleet were lowered to half mast.

HOW 2 BRITISH WARSHIPS AND 1 FRENCH SUNK BY TURKISH MINES RANKED

The two battleships lost by the British and the one French battleship were sent to the bottom by the Turks in the Dardanelles operations are described as "somewhat antiquated." It is true they were built before the days of the original dreadnought, but were undoubtedly of great value in connection with the Dardanelles work.

The British battleship Irresistible was commanded by Captain the Honorable Stanhope Hawke, and in times of peace, had a complement of 750 men.

She was the largest of the three allied battleships sunk, being of 15,000 tons displacement, and 420 feet length. Her chief armament consisted of four twelve-inch and twelve 6-inch guns. She also carried sixteen twelve-pounders, six three-pounders, two machine guns and four submerged torpedo tubes, and here armor was of Harvey nickel make. She was of eighteen knots speed and was built in 1898.

The French battleship Bouvet was a vessel of 12,000 tons displacement, laid down in 1893, with a complement of 621 men. Her armament consisted of two twelve-inch guns, two 10.8-inch, eight 5.5-inch, eight 3.5-inch, ten three-pounders and ten one-pounders, besides two torpedo tubes.

BIG BATTLE IN DARDANELLES IS DESCRIBED BY EYEWITNESS

Today the London Daily Telegraph's Tenedos correspondent cables a graphic account of what he saw as an eye-witness of most of the incident of the big battle in the Dardanelles.

The correspondent saw the battle from the peak of Mount Elias, 1,600 feet high, on Tenedos Island. His story follows:

Boston American and London Daily Telegraph Exclusive Cable Service.

TENEDOS, March 20.—After several days of inactivity on the part of the heavy vessels of the fleet a council of admirals was held, and in an agreement with the chiefs of the land forces it was decided to make an attempt to force the narrows by sea.

I rode my way to Mt. Elias, an eminence on this island, 1,600 feet from sea level, from which a splendid view was obtained of the entrance to the straits of Chanak and Kilid Bahr, respectively, on the European and Asiatic shores. At the entrance of the narrows sixteen battleships, three battle cruisers, twelve British and four French, took part in the action.

At 9 a. m. six British warships moved out from Kephez anchorage at the foot of Mount Elias and headed for the mouth of the entrance. They were followed at a distance of about three miles by one of the divisions of the French squadron, which comprise the Suffren, Bouvet, Charlemagne and Gaulois.

The British squadron passed the entrance of the straits, the Inflexible leading. They advanced four and two abreast, the last being the Queen Elizabeth. When they had passed the entrance they changed into a fan-like formation. At 10:40 the foremost ship fired two shots. Then three vessels disappeared from view, hugging the Krenkeu Bay shore.

Saw Fire and Smoke on French Battleship.

By this time the French squadron had passed the mouth of the entrance in line ahead formation.

The British ships now began firing at the Kilid Bahr and Chanak forts and at 11:30 o'clock I got their fire was thoroughly. About two minutes after the sudden intensity of the bombardment was a Turkish warship that made its appearance around the point of Kilid Bahr, was turned and disappeared, emitting volumes of smoke from her funnel denoting a hurry to get away.

By 11:30 the British ships occupied a line extending across the basin starting from above Erenkeu village to the opposite shore. Soon afterwards there began a sustained fire against Kilid Bahr and Chanak. Suddenly from the latter immense flames shot up followed by a dense smoke probably the explosion of the powder magazine.

The French squadron had joined the line of British ships and began action.

At noon the Turks commenced replying rapidly. I discerned six immense spouts of water rise from both sides of one of our ships. A little later I saw a Turkish shell take effect on one of our ships and it caused a fire on board. Six minutes afterwards the fire ceased. Flashes from her guns were again discerned.

At 12:10 flames and smoke rose from one of the French ships. The chaplain from the hospital ship sitting beside me thought it was the Bouvet. She quitted the line and disappeared, hugging the shore of Krenkeu bay.

At this juncture a seaplane left an aeroplane ship anchored below me, and, flying over the head of ships disappeared a distance up the straits. From 12:30 to 1 the bombardment became very intense, the Turks replying vigorously. Huge spouts of water from their shells were soon all over the lines of battleships, some taking effect.

At the distance from which I was witnessing this awe-inspiring picture it was difficult to discern which particular ship was hit. On the other hand the deadly effect of the fire from the ships could be noted by the volumes of black smoke rising as each shot took effect.

The most active activity of the enemy was called forth by the attempt of three leading ships to get in close range. At 1:30 p. m. the intensity of the firing abated, only occasional shots being discharged from both forts. At one time there was an entire lull in the firing from the ships, but the Turks continued firing.

A fresh squadron of six British ships left the roads of Tenedos at 12:45 p. m., formed into the entrance and passed in. There were now sixteen battleships and cruisers operating in the French basin of the Straits. At 2:45 p. m. two ships appeared to have advanced further toward the narrows. This called forth a spell of intense activity from the Turkish batteries. I saw two hits take effect on these two ships and smoke issued from them for about ten minutes. Then the smoke cleared.

Only three ships were visible at 3 p. m. in that part of the basin open to my view including the Queen Elizabeth, which kept all the time firing from the Kum Kale. The others were hidden from view, hugging the shores of Erenkeu Bay.

Just after 3 o'clock shells from the Queen Elizabeth caused another explosion at Kilid Bahr. Again the same awful spectacle was seen. Tremendous flames that looked mountain high were followed by a regular cloud of smoke. At several places both Kilid Bahr and Chanak were now burning.

Two Turkish Batteries Silenced.

Suddenly, at 4:30 p. m., from two places just before Kephez, Burun, appeared two batteries of Turkish batteries, one of three, the other of the two guns. From this place no fire had come today. They must have been mortar batteries. They opened fire but at 5:30 were silenced by the fire from the Queen Elizabeth.

Afterward a French ship came out from the Straits, convered by two others. Evidently she had sustained damage, but was grounded on one of the Rabbit Islands. Night was coming and the fall of darkness showed the town of Chanak in flames. The ships were still in the straits, extending evident to continue the attack during the night.

RUSSIANS AIMING AT KOENIGSBERG

LONDON, March 20.—The advance of the Russians in the Memel district of East Prussia is assuming a large significance in the view of war experts here. The German official report, issued at Berlin today, admits that Memel, the Baltic Sea port in the extreme northern portion of Prussia, has been occupied by the Russians, while Petrograd announces that Russian troops have again crossed the Niemen and are making a drive toward the German fortress of Koenigsberg.

The success of the operations in the Memel district, it was stated at the Russian War Office, constitute the Czar's general staff that most of the German troops in the northern part of East Prussia have been withdrawn to other fronts, and that the time is favorable to launch a new attack on Koenigsberg.

Large forces of Russian cavalry are reported fifty miles from Koenigsberg. Investment of that fortress would permit a continuation of the flanking movement now in progress along the Niemen River, where 150,000 Russian troops are reported to have concentrated.

The situation on the other fronts, in Poland, Galicia, Bukowina, and trans-Caucasia, is reported unchanged except for artillery duels and cavalry skirmishes.

GERMAN GAIN IN FLANDERS.

The German official report states that the Kaisers troops have made an advance in Flanders, capturing from the English a group of houses on the south slope of Loretta Heights, and have also taken some French trenches in Champagne. French attacks in Alsace have been repulsed with heavy losses, it is claimed.

The Berlin report follows:

"On the road between Wytschaete and Ypres, near St. Eloi, the Germans yesterday took from the English a group of houses on the south slope of Loretta Heights. The enemy has maintained himself until the French forces have been driven out.

"In Champagne, the day was generally quiet, after the German troops had taken from French trenches north of Beausejour at dawn in the morning. Partial French attacks east of Verdun in the Woevre plain and on the east edge of the Meuse heights near Consoles were repulsed. They enemy suffered heavy losses.

"The French attempted several advances against the German position at Leichacker Kopf and Hartmannsweiler-Kopf, which broke down in the beginning because of the heavy fire of our German fire.

"On the eastern front the day was as comparatively quiet. Memel has been occupied by the Russians."

KING INSPIRES TROOPS.

Withdrawal of German troops from the Ypes region in Flanders to reinforce the lineaear Neuve Chapelle in northern France has enabled the British forces to make an important success in Belgium and their new positions have now been all consolidated, according to Paris dispatches.

Before the attack King Albert went among his men in person to raise to the highest pitch of fervor. Belgian artillery, reinforced by French guns, shelled the German batteries near Westende and Dixmude violently.

A German battery planted in a church yard near Dixmude was silenced by a shell of commission in a Belgian batteries. East of Steenstraate, South of Dixmude, the Germans delivered strong counter attacks, all of which were repulsed. The German artillery, stationed between Labassee and Beaucamps in French territory, is shelling Lapelle and Givenchy where the British hold positions.

Severe artillery duels are in progress in the Aisne valley and the Champagne districts. North of Arras and Perthe infantry fighting continues.

Warship Amethyst Cut Asiatic Cable

LONDON, March 20.—"The casualties reported sustained on the British cruiser Amethyst are the result of a smart piece of work which she performed in the Dardanelles when, it is said, she was entrusted with the difficult task of cutting the telegraph cable connecting Kilid Bahr with Chanak," says the Malta correspondent of the Reuter's Telegram Company. The correspondent continues: "She succeeded in lifting and cutting the cable undetected and had started her return journey when she was discovered.

UNDERSEA TOLL IS 32 BRITISH SHIPS

SOUTH SHIELDS, Eng., March 20.—German aeroplanes cruising over the North Sea yesterday with bombs the steamer Cordoba as she was entering Yarmouth Harbor, but the missiles did no damage, and the tanker was cleared away by English airmen. Although the attack was made on February 26, news of it did not become known until today.

A German aeroplane dropped several bombs near the coast off Deal today. All fell into the sea. A naval patrol boat fired several shots at the aeroplane, which disappeared to the eastward.

LONDON, March 20.—That the German submarine campaign against English shipping had been more successful than was expected was admitted officially at the Admiralty today. This admission came simultaneously with an announcement that during the week ending March 17 eight British vessels had been torpedoed and sunk by submarines.

The Admiralty announcement listed the names of the British ships during one week: Florazan, Headlands, Indian City, Andalusian, Invergyle, Hartdale, Fingal and Leanwarden.

During that time the Swedish steamer Hanna, a neutral vessel, was also sunk. She was torpedoed on March 13.

According to the Admiralty, the total number of arrivals of steamers over 300 tons during the week ended March 17 was 1,539. It stated that in addition to those sunk in the seven days three ships were torpedoed, but kept afloat.

These eight vessels had a total tonnage of 23,825 tons. That most of them were small vessels does not detract from the fact that the underwater craft of the Germans are being successful.

The official announcement does not include a record of the sinking of the Glenartney, which was sent to the bottom on March 18, making nine ships sunk in that week.

Since the Germans began their submarine campaign February 18, thirty-two English vessels have been sunk or badly damaged by the submarines.

Dynamiter Horn in Portland Jail

PORTLAND, Me., March 20.—Werner Horn, bridge dynamiter, was brought to Cumberland County Jail this afternoon from Bangor in charge of United States Marshal John S. P. H. Wilson and Deputy P. S. Marshal Berton Smith. He will be kept at the jail pending the issuance by Judge Hale of the U. S. District Court, of the papers necessary for his removal to Boston.

Horn will be taken to Boston for arraignment on the charge of illegally transporting dynamite to Vanceboro, Me., for the purpose of destroying the International Railway bridge. There was a big crowd of curiosity seekers at the station when Horn's train arrived. Horn was hustled into a taxi and rushed to jail. He appeared in good spirits.

Remove Broken Bone from Kaiser's Son

GENEVA, March 20.—The Deutsches Tages Zeitung says the Prince August Wilhelm, the Kaiser's fourth son, has undergone a surgical operation as a result of a motor accident. A piece of broken bone was removed from the lower part of the thigh. The patient's condition is satisfactory.

Report Kaiser Is Ill in Berlin

GENEVA, March 18.—A dispatch received here from Berlin says the Kaiser is seriously ill in the German capital. The Swiss specialist, Dr. Marmod, it is stated, considers an immediate operation essential.

KARLSRUHE BLOWN UP BY OWN CREW

NEW YORK, March 20.—The German cruiser Karlsruhe was blown up by her own crew early today, ago, after she had gone on a reef off St. Charles, a town in the Island of Grenada in the West Indies, according to Edward Wadsworth of Newark, N. J., who arrived at this port on the Quebec steamship Parisme, from St. Thomas.

Wadsworth said he obtained his information from fishermen, who said the crew of the Karlsruhe were transferred to another German warship. He said he was told the story when the fishermen carried ashore two life buoys marked "Karlsruhe" in German letters and several German naval officers' caps, which Wadsworth found in the water off St. Charles while fishing three weeks ago.

The natives said that two weeks before that a German warship had come aground off the town and her crew had blown her up, transferring to another German craft standing by. The chief of staff of the white people of St. Charles professed to believe it was some other craft than the Karlsruhe blown up by the Germans in an effort to drive the British into thinking the Karlsruhe was out of the way.

Report Austria Yields to Italy

ROME, March 20.—Reports are current in diplomatic circles that Austria has agreed to cede the districts of Trent and Friuli to Italy and that the preliminary draft providing for the cession was signed in Vienna last Sunday.

No official confirmation was obtainable, but those circulating the report declared that word came from the Austrian embassy. Officials of the embassy refused to comment.

The report caused an unfavorable impression upon the Italian public, which is clamoring for Trieste also.

According to the report, Emperor Francis Joseph consulted with the Austrian Premier, Foreign Minister and Minister of War before considering the question of Austrian territory, and then called the chief of staff of the Austrian army for his opinion.

The chief of staff is said to have stated that the military situation between the Italian border was precarious.

Doubt as to the accuracy of this report was expressed by prominent Italian officials, but they asserted that owing to the censorship there were still "many subordinate questions" that might block a successful termination of the negotiations.

MRS. ANGLE FELT SURE OF FREEDOM

STAMFORD, Conn., March 20.—Happy in the vindication she received at the hands of the jury in the Superior Court yesterday at Bridgeport, when she was acquitted of causing the death of Waldo H. Ballou, Mrs. Helen M. Angle was a very different woman today from the broken, dispirited person who had gone through the ordeal that followed the tragedy.

Mrs. Angle went direct to the home of her friend, Mrs. Barrett, in Franklin street, last night after her acquittal. The reaction of the excitement under which she had been, caused her to swoon when the jury announced its verdict, but she recovered soon.

Mrs. Angel's father, Leonard Blondell, was the first caller she had today. He went to her with copies of the morning papers and remained with her the greater part of the forenoon.

Neither Mr. Blondell nor his daughter cared to talk about the case. They said that it was all over and the verdict of the jury was all that need be said for them.

"My own friends never doubted my innocence," she told a visitor, "but I wanted the general public to know I was innocent. Now that the jury has given its verdict freeing me from this awful charge, I am content. I felt that the jury would acquit me."

Mrs. Angle and her father will remain here temporarily. Later they will go to Maine for a long period of rest.

"Connie" Warren Is a War Heroine

NEWPORT, R. I., March 20.—Word reached Newport today that the Countess Guy de Lasteyrie (Constance Warren) is distinguishing herself by driving an ambulance for the Red Cross in the war zone with such frequency, speed and cleverness that she is being warmly praised by her fellow workers.

This is about what might have been expected, for the Newport record is that whatever "Connie" Warren undertook to do she was pretty sure to do well, no matter how strenuous. "Connie" Warren was some sport's famous athlete, second only to Eleonora Sears of Boston.

Others who are doing wonderfully good work for the Red Cross abroad are the Duchess of Marlborough (Consuelo Vanderbilt) in England, Mrs. Mabel Yardley, working with the Belgians; Lady Camoys (Mildred Sherman), and the Countess of Granard (Beatrice Mills), Mrs. William B. Leeds, the Duchess of Roxburghe (May Goelet), the Countess Sanford Sigray (Harriet Daly), the Countess Bacchanyi (Gladys Vanderbilt), and her sister, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who went over with a field hospital, and Miss Edith Deacon of Boston.

Gen. Carranza to Defend Vera Cruz

WASHINGTON, March 20.—General Carranza has begun extensive preparations to fortify Vera Cruz, Vice-Consul Silliman today notified the State Department.

Reports received in administration circles have given rise to the belief that Carranza is nearing the end of his reign as "first chief" of the Constitutionalists. Reports have reached Washington that Carranza is selling for gold large quantities of food supplies which he had stored at Vera Cruz.

The Zapatico situation is being given much attention by officials. With General Villa pressing to the attack, some concern was felt for the safety of the valuable foreign oil properties, but it was believed these would be protected.

Stegler Is Given 60 Days in Jail

NEW YORK, March 20.—Richard P. Stegler, the German secret reservist, was given sixty days in jail, following a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiracy against the government in obtaining passports. His counsel, Charles H. Griffiths, in asking for a light sentence, declared a representative of the German government in this country who, on account of his position, is immune from arrest, was the arch conspirator in the plot.

'Sir' James Carlton Given 4-Year Term

"Sir" James Carlton, who cut a wide swarth with city politicians last Summer and was entertained by Mayor Curley as an Englishman who had a lot of money to invest in booming Boston and who was subsequently arrested on a charge of local immigration officers in the case of a woman brought into this country, has been sentenced to four years in prison for obtaining money under false pretences at Gateshead, Eng.

Report Shows Big Output of Cotton

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A report today issued by the Census Bureau shows the cotton crop of 1914, excluding linters, to be 15,873,902 bales, counting round bales, as compared with 13,852,811 for 1913. Included in the statistics for 1914 are 57,618 round bales and 81,598 bales of Sea Island. The average gross weight of the bale is 497.2 pounds for 1914, compared with 506.2 for 1913.

Mystery in Boston 'Osborne' Girl's Accuser Unknown Here

Miss Rae Tanzer, whose suit for $50,000 against James W. Osborne will not be affected, says her lawyer, David Slade, by the mysterious "Oliver Osborne," of Boston. He promises a statement from her that will "throw Jim Osborne off the map," and revelations later fit "to make New York gasp."

Rae Tanzer, Who Sues Noted Lawyer, Promises Startling New Revelations.

New mystery was thrown today into the case of Miss Rae Tanzer, who is suing James W. Osborne, former Assistant District Attorney of New York for $50,000, when the Boston police reported to the New York police that they had been unable to find any trace of the man who declares that he is the "Dear Oliver" mentioned in the suit.

The Boston police report that no one by the name of Oliver Osborne is known at the two addresses in Boston which he is said to have given and that no one answering to his description is known at either place.

Miss Tanzer spent the night in the Greenwich street police station, following her arrest on a charge of misuse of the mails in an attempt to defraud. She sent the matron out for a newspaper early today, spread it out on her knees and calmly began to read.

"He was desperately in love with me," she asserted with a smile after reading about her case for a few minutes. When some one inquired which Osborne she meant, she replied "Why, I only know one." She looked anything but depressed and continued her reading. She was arraigned later before Commissioner Houghton and held in $5,000 bail for examination next Wednesday on a charge of misuse of the mails in an attempt to defraud. She pleaded not guilty.

The story told by "Oliver Osborne of Boston," resulted in Miss Tanzer's arrest.

David Slade, Miss Tanzer's attorney, denounced Oliver Osborne's story as "an unqualified falsehood."

"It is the most outrageous bit of work ever perpetrated," he said. "Within a few days Mr. James W. Osborne will receive the shock of his life. My client will make a statement, and she will tell a story that will defy all attacks. It will be one of the sensations of the year."

The "Boston" Osborne appeared in New York with the statement that he was the "Oliver" to whom Rae Tanzer had been writing, and to whom he had been writing, and that Rae Tanzer knew all along that he and the New York Osborne were two different men.

There is no "Oliver Osborne" in the Boston directory, however, nor is there an "Oliver Osborne" at No. 222 West Newton street, the address given by the claimant to Miss Tanzer's attentions. The "Boston" Osborne said also that he was a machinist employed at No. 210 Clay street. There is but one Clay street in Boston. That is a very short street in Hyde Park, with a dozen dwelling houses on it. All efforts to locate a "Boston" Osborne proved futile to date.

The "Boston" Osborne walked into the "New York" Osborne's office yesterday, meeting Gilbert D. Lamb, Osborne's partner. He told his story, producing "Dear Oliver" letters, in handwriting which is said to be identical with the "Dear Oliver" letters received by James W. Orborne at the New York Athletic Club.

The new man in the case said he had come from Boston to exonerate Attorney Osborne and insisted on telling his story to Mrs. Osborne.

GENERAL ALARM FOR QUINCY FIRE

The Welch block—a collection of one-story stores in Hancock street, City square, Quincy—was threatened with destruction early today by a general alarm fire which started in the clothing store of the Orent-Payson Company and spread to the two adjoining stores, occupied by the C. F. Pettengill Jewelry Store on one side and the "Daylight Store" on the other side.

The damage, from estimates furnished by members of the firms affected, aggregates $25,400. J. L. Payson, member of the firm of clothiers, estimated their damage at $17,000; T. B. Davenport, manager of the jewelry store, set the loss there, mostly from smoke, at $2,500. C. E. Sherman, proprietor of the Daylight dry goods store, estimated his loss at $6,000. The Welch estate loss, on buildings, was estimated at $3,000 by Chief Payson Billings of the fire department; the proprietor of the Emmanuel Company, candy store, figured he had lost $400 by smoke and water damage, and Herbert Pratt, whose print shop was flooded, thinks it will cost him $500.

J. L. Payson, who arrived at the fire on the second alarm, was overcome by smoke in trying to rescue papers. The fire was discovered by Patrolman David L. Farrell.

Cardinal Anthony Agliardi Dead at 85

ROME, March 20.—Peace in Europe has lost an able champion in the death of Cardinal Anthony Agliardi, who passed away last night at the age of eighty-five. Special mass for the late cardinal was held by Pope Benedict in his private chapel today. The death of Cardinal Agliardi will necessitate the selection of a successor to the chancellorship of the Catholic church and sub-dean of the Sacred College.

Ill, Woman Editor Leaps to Death

NEW YORK, March 20.—Delirious from typhoid fever, Mrs. Ellen Hinsey, thirty-two, sister of W. W. Farley, State excise commissioner, and editor of a woman's magazine in Detroit, committed suicide today by throwing herself from a window at No. 972 St. Nicholas avenue.

Quash Indictment Against 'Lanky Bob'

METUCHEN, N. J., March 20.—District Attorney Florence won a motion to quash an indictment against Robert Fitzsimmons and Mrs. Tena Sloan, who was alleged to be Fitzsimmons' housekeeper.

BOSTON-NEW YORK PIGEON FLIGHT

Mayor Curley liberated six carrier pigeons from the roof of the W. & A. Bacon Company store at 10:15 a. m. today. The pigeons carried a message from Mayor Curley to Mayor John P. Mitchel of New York. The message read as follows:

My Dear Mr. Mayor: May this dove of peace typify the eternal relations of the best city in the world and the greatest city in America. Sincerely Yours,

JAMES M. CURLEY,
Mayor of Boston.

The Bacon store opened a contest a week ago, offering prizes amounting to $40 for persons guessing nearest to the exact time that it would take the first pigeon to reach New York from Boston. Over 3,500 people responded and the winners will be announced as soon as word is received from New York that one of the six pigeons has arrived at New York City Hall.

A pigeon fancier who was present when the birds started on their journey said that it was an excellent day for the event and that the first pigeon would reach his destination before 4 o'clock.

Helen Keller Feels Sight Will Come to Her as by Miracle

"Some day, I feel, a most wonderful thing will come into my life," Helen Keller, the remarkable blind girl who grew up in Boston, is quoted as saying in Los Angeles dispatches. "It will be a miracle that will make my eyes to see. When it comes, then I feel objects will look no different than I now picture them in my mind's eye.

"Only a miracle can give me that wonderful sight and make my eyes perform their functions. But the Creator has been wonderfully kind to me. He has given me fingers with which I can talk, hear and see, and some day I feel He may place His hand upon my eyes and take away the darkness."

'The Natural Law' Educational, Says Police Censor

Inspector Morris Wolf, representing Police Commissioner O'Meara at the performance of "The Natural Law" at the Cort Theatre, says he could see nothing objectionable about the play. John M. Casey, the municipal censor, refused to say what he thought of the show.

"It is a very even, young woman should go," said Wolf. "My men saw it with me and I intend that my three daughters shall see it, as it is an educational drama and should be considered from that point."

Symphony Players Leave for Panama Exposition May 9

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, carrying its entire membership of 100 men, will leave Boston for the Panama Exposition the night of May 9.

The Panama Exposition retains the exclusive right of presenting the orchestra, and is said to have guaranteed to pay a large sum of money for each of the thirteen concerts to be played on its grounds.

First Smoke Sends Boy to Hospital

NEWARK, N. J., March 20.—Harry Addison, seven, is in the City Hospital because he escaped to smoke his first cigar.

The youngster found the cigar in the house and took it out on the front stoop. There he lighted it and puffed away. Soon growing dizzy, he wandered down the steps and into the street. As a department store wagon came along, the boy lost his balance and fell in the horses' path. He was run over and received internal injuries.

Quaker City Sees First Straw Hat

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—C. O. Reichardt of Atlantic City strutted down Chestnut street today under the first straw hat of the season. The crowd gasped.

"The Declaration of Independence was signed here," said Reginald. "The hat cost $2, and I wear it because I like it. Somebody knock it off and Philadelphia will wake up."

Burns and Window Leap Fatal to Woman

WORCESTER, March 20.—Mrs. Lavina Giguere of East Douglas is dead at the Worcester City Hospital as the result of being burned about the head, back and chest in her home. She was working about her kitchen and becoming alarmed when her clothing took fire, she jumped out a window.

Accused Testifies at Gingras Trial

LOWELL, March 20.—The defence resumed today in the trial of Peter Sannita and Andrew Harris, charged with the murder of Andrew Gingras. Harris was expected to again take the witness stand.

Pratt Convicted of Maine Slaying

SOUTH PARIS, Me., March 20.—Prescott Pratt was found guilty of the murder of George W. Davis of Portland. Davis disappeared late in September, after being seen here in company with Pratt.

JOBLESS RELISH BACK BAY FOOD

The guests of Boston's newest "hotel"—the "de Jobless"—who were regaled yesterday with a visit by residents of the Back Bay laden with coffee, sandwiches and fruit, will get a real treat tonight. Mrs. Lyman Winsor, lady director of the Toy Theatre, Miss Gertrude Kingston, the actress now playing there, Mr. Herbert and Mr. Morely will give a special performance at the theatre to entertain the jobless.

Yesterday was a red-letter day in the still brief annals of the hotel. First descended on the soup automobiles crowded with Back Bay women and loaded with food. The men liked it, were fed, and won another appreciation by their courteous, considerate behavior.

Their luncheon consisted of 100 gallons of coffee and 2,000 sandwiches. These were served to the men by Miss Florence Stern and Mrs. John E. McKenna, of the Hotel Nottingham, assisted by Miss Florence Leighton, Mrs. Maud Anderson, Miss Emma Adams, Miss Gladys Strong, Miss Winifred Collop and Mrs. Arthur J. Crosbie.

After the lunch had disappeared, Mrs. Stern sang songs for the men, accompanied on the hotel piano by Mrs. McKenna, while the men gathered around joining in the chorus.

Among the other visitors was George W. Coleman, member of the City Council, who came as a special delegate from the Mayor's office to look the hotel and its guests over. On his departure he issued an official "O. K." together with his assurance of all the help he could influence to prevent interference with the hotel. "They are doing better than most men could do," Mr. Coleman announced on the hotel piano by Mrs. McKenna, while the men gathered around joining in the chorus.

With such visitors the order passed by the fire department forbidding smoking was less arduous than it might otherwise have been. A huge donation of candy, by Mrs. Helen Hyde, also assisted in raising the gloom which might have been caused by the "no-smoking" rule. Twelve of the "guests" were supplied with jobs yesterday. More than 400 have registered as applicants for work.

Wires Cause Fire in the Arena

Fire, caused by defective wires, gave the firemen a hard fight in the Boston Arena on St. Botolph street, Back Bay, early today, according to the police, caused a damage of $5,000.

The blaze started in the forward part of the building under the office. It was discovered by Chief Kilcoin, the engineer, who sounded the alarm.

Upon the arrival of the firemen every precaution was taken to keep the flames from reaching the ammonia plant, which is located in the rear of the building. In order to reach the flames it was necessary to cut away a large section of the office floor.

18 Tenants Flee Pittsfield Fire

PITTSFIELD, March 20.—The Coburn Building on North street, a five-story brick store and apartment structure; the Farrell Building, abutting the Coburn Building on the north, and the Farrell homestead, just south, were damaged by fire, the police estimating the total damage at $100,000. The twenty tenants of the Coburn Building and six tenants of the Farrell Building were rendered homeless.

Gloucester Fire Chief to Quit Job

GLOUCESTER, March 20.—Charles W. Crowe, for eighteen years chief of the fire department, has sent his resignation to the City Council. He asks to be relieved at once because of failing health.

Hunt Aged 'Jack the Ripper' Pretty Little Girl Slain

NEW YORK, March 20.—In the hope that finger imprints might assist the police in running down the murderer of five-year-old Leonore Ann Cohen, who was stabbed to death in her home at No. 253 Third avenue, last night, the detective bureau today had the child's throat photographed. The little girl had evidently been choked to prevent any outcry while the murderer plunged a sharp knife into her abdomen. She had been cruelly mutilated.

Detectives are searching every haunt of the underworld for the "Jack the Ripper," who is believed to be an aged man whose moral nature has been perverted through the use of drugs.

The finding of gray hairs clutched in the dead child's hands, and the fact that an old man of suspicious appearance and actions had been seen hanging around the house for several days, gave the police their strongest clew. The old man's actions, while in the neighborhood, led to the belief he was a drug fiend.

Little Leonore was passing through the halls of the apartment in which she lived when she was attacked and killed. But so swiftly and silently had the assassin worked that the tragedy had been enacted and the slayer had escaped before any alarm was given.

Leonore was on her way from a store at the time. By the side of the body was a ball of milk which she had purchased, not one drop of which was spilled. Nearby was a small bag of candy.

Banker Sister of Jane Addams Dies

CHICAGO, March 20.—Mrs. Alice Haldeman of Girard, Kan., sister of Miss Jane Addams of Hull House and one of the few women bankers in the United States, is dead here. She was president of the State Bank of Girard and vice-president of the Western Bankers' Association.

Eliot Celebrates His 81st Birthday

Today is the 81st birthday of Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard. Following the custom of several years, he will celebrate the day quietly at his home in Cambridge.

BIG ARTISTS FOR JEWISH BENEFIT

Additional artists were announced today for the benefit concert to be given in the Cort Theatre tomorrow evening in aid of the Jewish war sufferers throughout Europe and Palestine.

The benefit is being given under the auspices of the Boston Newsboys' Protective Union and the program which will be offered will appeal to the public strongly.

The additional artists, whose appearance tomorrow evening is now assured, are:

Guy Maier, piano virtuoso.

Master Brower, monologue, from Loew's Globe Theatre.

Artists previously announced include:

Miss Amelia Conti Berenguer, harpist, of the Boston Opera Company.

Mme. Cyra Sapin of the Boston Opera Company.

Fannie Lott, soprano, who will sing the soubrette from "Lucia," assisted by a quartet.

Ellery F. Tuck, violin soloist, "Caprice Viennois," by Fritz Kreisler.

James Harrod, principal tenor of Andreas Dippel Opera Company.

Mme. Jeanne Maubourgin, principal contralto of "The Lilac Domino" company, Polish folk and French songs.

Pilgrim Male Quartet—Tenors, Everett S. Gilnes, Robert Fitzgerald; baritone, Percy F. Baker; bass, William Catafalo, Jr.

Assisting artists at piano—Dr. Frank Cuthbert Nash, Teresa E. Tuck, Milan Roder of Andreas Dippel Opera Company.

The concert will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. F. C. Carr is giving his experienced service as stage manager. Dr. Nash is serving as general musical director.

The benefit committee of the Newsboys' Protective Union reported today a good sale of tickets. Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley are expected among the audience. Prominent business men have purchased tickets.

The benefit appeals to Bostonians particularly, on account of its meritorious object, the high quality of the program and the popular interest in the Boston "newsie" and anything he undertakes.

H. S. Treadwell of Postal Service Dies

Henry S. Treadwell, superintendent of the South Boston branch of the postoffice, is dead at his home, No. 19 Westbourne street, Roslindale, after a short illness. He was seventy-one years old. He was born in Ipswich. He became superintendent of the South Boston postal station in 1891. He was a veteran of the Civil War, and a past commander of Dahlgren Post No. 2, G. A. R., South Boston. He was a member of several fraternal organizations. He leaves a son and two daughters. The funeral will be held Monday, and interment will be at Ipswich.

Pratt Given Life Term; Confesses

SOUTH PARIS, Me., March 20.—Prescott Pratt, who last night was found guilty of causing the death of George Davis at South Paris, was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor in the State prison at Thomaston today by Judge Spear. Just before sentence was pronounced the judge said: "Have you anything to say, Prescott?" Pratt, in a quite calm voice, answered: "I am guilty myself and nobody else. I was intoxicated at the time. It was an accident."

Held for Somerville Break.

Leo J. Laverty, twenty-two, who returned a short while ago after serving three years in the United States prison, has been arrested charged with breaking and entering the home of W. E. Stickle in Teele square in 1911.

This Hand Holds "Opportunity" For You

Tomorrow in the Sunday American this hand will open to you an offer that will appeal to you if you have ever longed to see Niagara Falls, to speed over the plains of Nebraska on your way to the foothills of the Rockies, to glory in the splendor of the "Garden of the Gods," to feast your eyes on the wonders of mountain scenery in the Grand Canon of the Colorado—unrivalled in the world in its grandeur, to see the giant redwoods, and—

But Wait Till Tomorrow—Get THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

It will unfold an offer which will make it possible for you to actually spend your vacation among scenes and surroundings the splendor of which you have perhaps dreamed of and longed some day to see. Your dreams can now come true.

The wonderful announcement that tomorrow's Sunday American will contain will be vitally interesting to every one of its hundreds of thousands of readers—men, women and children alike.

We are making this preliminary announcement so that no one will miss reading the big offer which this newspaper has prepared for its readers tomorrow. If you are living in New England and over sixteen years of age it means much to you.

Full Details Will Be Given in Tomorrow's Sunday American. Don't Miss It. Order It from Your Newsdealer Today.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

The Universalists are holding a number of "The Christian Life Meetings" in various sections of the State to get the unchurched nearer to the work of the churches and to keep them there. Meetings will be held in every Universalist church every evening for three weeks.

Three hundred thousand individuals are within the reach of the eleven Universalist churches, which will hold evangelistic services next week. The Rev. F. A. Bisbee will preach at Roxbury, the Rev. E. C. Downey at Jamaica Plain, the Rev. S. H. Robins, D. D., at South Boston, the Rev. E. E. Miles at East Boston, the Rev. E. Perry Bush at First Church, Cambridge, the Rev. H. D. Maxwell at North Cambridge and the Rev. R. E. Sykes at Charlestown.

The reckoning of the work will be made at Easter, when the churches will send in their reports.

* * *

"The Man with the Sickle" is the topic of the address to be given by Evangelist W. R. Uchtmann of the R. D. A. Church, Studio Building, Davis square, West Somerville, at 7:00 p. m.

* * *

Guy A. Ham will speak before the annual meeting and banquet of the Women's Bible Class Auxiliary of Immanuel Baptist Church, Dorchester, March 20, at 8 p. m. "The Sunshine Band," a group of little girls, will sing every Sunday at the church services.

* * *

Mrs. E. M. Whitmore of New York will give the opening address at the sixteenth anniversary of the Merrimac Mission in Park Street Church, Wednesday, at 7:30 p. m. J. David Fraser of Montreal and the Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., will also speak.

* * *

"Billy" Sunday is no stranger in Boston. Thirty years ago, whenever he was playing baseball in this city he found time on Sunday to attend the Hall Bible Class of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church.

* * *

Mrs. Mary E. Bigelow of Wells River, Vt., has been a member of the church for seventy-seven years, uniting with it when seventeen years of age.

* * *

* * *

"The Better Life" campaign will begin tomorrow evening in the Dorchester Baptist Temple, with an address on "An Honest Man," by Mr. Charles R. Brum of Syracuse, N. Y. At 3 p. m., Thursday, in the church, he will meet the mothers accompanied by their daughters who are fifteen, and talk on "Choosing a Friend and Making a Home." In the evening of the same day he will speak to men and older boys on "The Other Fellow's Sister."

* * *

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, formerly of Malden, has just returned from Honolulu where he held the Hawaiian Methodist Mission Conference.

* * *

The Rev. Peter Black will address the Methodist ministers Monday in Wesleyan Hall at 10:30. At the last meeting the Rev. A. H. Nazarian, D. D., pastor of the Peoples Temple, Boston, spoke forty minutes on "Why the Preaching of Billy Sunday Is Popular."

* * *

"Give Him a Lift" is the topic of the lecture to be given by Bishop Joseph F. Berry in the First Swedish Methodist Church, Roxbury, Thursday, at 8 p. m.

* * *

The sum of $1,266 has been recently raised by members of the First M. E. Church, Waltham, for a parsonage. The church has a children's "Go-to-Church" band of fifty boys and girls.

* * *

The annual collection for the Congregational Education Society will be taken tomorrow morning in the Old South Church.

* * *

The third annual banquet of the Corner Stone Boys' League of the Union Congregational Church, Columbus avenue, will be held Wednesday evening, April 7, in the vestry of the church. This is the great event of the year for the men of the church.

* * *

The Rev. W. J. Clarke of the Church of the Ascension, Washington street, will leave for a short vacation to the Pacific Coast, April 4, and take in the Panama exposition.

* * *

The Rev. George L. Hanscom will preach tomorrow in the Shawmut Congregational Church. This church has been without a settled pastor for nearly five months, since the resignation of the Rev. Dr. E. E. Shumaker.

* * *

Rev. B. A. Willmott has been called to the pastorate of the Immanuel-Walnut Avenue Congregational Church, Roxbury, made vacant by the resignation of the Rev. C. A. Vincent, D. D., who has taken charge of a church in Brooklyn, N. Y.

* * *

The Universalist ministers will hear about the merits of "Billy" Sunday Monday morning in Ballou Hall, Boylston street, from the lecturers of the Rev. W. F. Tufts, D. D., pastor of the Columbus Avenue Presbyterian Church.

* * *

The Rev. Edgar Lee Halfacre of Bethel, Vt., has accepted a call to the Universalist Church, Shirley, Mass.

* * *

Mayor Curley will address the Sunday Evening Forum in West Roxbury, at the Congregational Church, corner of Centre and Mt. Vernon streets, tomorrow evening. He will speak on "Some Contemporaneous Problems."

* * *

The indoor picnic of the Young People's Religious Union of Unitarian churches will take place in the parish house, West Roxbury, Saturday afternoon and evening, March 27. The program includes games, potato races, throwing the bean, and other pastimes, will be followed by a box lunch and dancing.

* * *

The Episcopal City Mission for one month has received $5,281 for its work.

* * *

"Every-Member-Day" will be observed Sunday, March 28, in the Greenwood Memorial M. E. Church, Dorchester, with a special sermon by President L. H. Murlin of Boston University.

* * *

At the Myrtle Baptist Church, West Newton, tomorrow morning, the pastor, Rev. William Wade Ryan will preach upon "Christ a Stumbling Block." Dr. L. B. Whitehead of Boston will speak at the evening services, and Miss Emma Mitchell, president of the Myrtle Literary, will read a paper upon "Redeeming the Time." The Literary meets every Sunday at 3 p. m.

The Rev. Charles Conklin, D. D., pastor of the Beacon Universalist Church, Brookline, is doing in his neighborhood a most practical work along social lines. He has held responsible positions in his denomination and is considered a minister of marked ability, as a preacher and organizer.

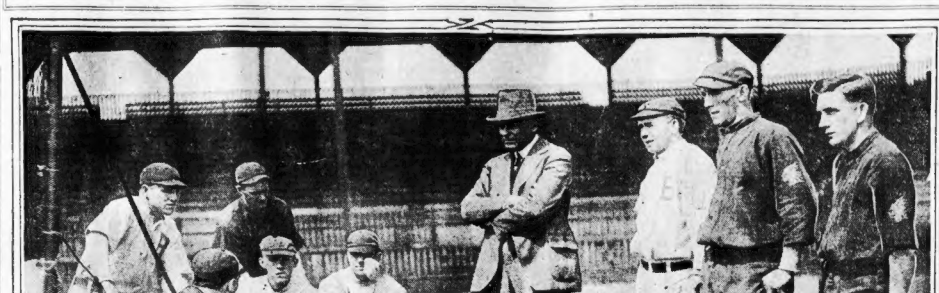
MANAGER STALLINGS GIVING THE BRAVES 'SKULL PRACTICE'



This photograph, taken at the Braves' camp at Macon, Ga., shows Manager Stallings (in street clothes) engaged in free discussion with his men. Each player is allowed to give his own views on correcting the faults of others or describing plays or points which he thinks might be of advantage to the team, or, as Julian Hawthorne says in the accompanying article, "Skull practice is a lecture, a hauling over the coals, sometimes; advice; warning; encouragement; a review of what has been done and of its significance, and a forecast of what is ahead. On the right side of Stallings, facing the camera, are "Red" Smith, "Hank" Gowdy and "Rabbit" Maranville. Evers is in the centre of the group on the left of Stallings; Connolly is on the extreme left, and "Lefty" Tyler is in back to Evers.

WESTERN ROLLERS IN BIG TOURNEY

THE famous Minerville team of Chicago, which is competing at Peoria on the present time, has sent in an entry blank for the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association tournament to be held in Boston next month. The famous Peoria rollers, who have not missed a big tournament in more than ten years, will create a fine impression in the contest at Mechanics Building. It is a midwinter event and every man in the lineup is famous wherever tenpins are bowled, not only in the United States and Canada but even in Germany, where the quintet represented the United States in a famous international tourney.

* * *

THE five men composing the team are famous. Billie Lee was the winner of the Pittsburgh tournament in 1909. W. V. Thompson is the holder of more championships than any bowler in the United States, and has made more 200 scores than any roller in the history of the game. Ed Crandield, assistant postmaster of Chicago, is also known from coast to coast for his tenpin ability. He is a Southerner, and he famous as the first old man at all tournaments, as he carries a complete surgical outfit.

* * *

POP ELGIN is the veteran of the team and although he has two sons who are famous bowlers, one of them being on the American All-star team, Pop beat the youngsters in the individual class at Buffalo last year. H. W. Buckett is the social lion and in addition to being the Beau Brummel in the Lemplin world it is his duty to do all the entertaining for the Chicago Minerolites.

WASHINGTON D. C. will send at least two teams, one of them the famous quintet which rolled a match last October with Brooklyn. The Washington boys love to bowl and are ready, open to take on their favorite pastime on any alleys in New England for any sum of money during the tournament or the A. C. B. A. championship. Two special cars will bring the Washington crew to Boston.

* * *

AL EDDY and Jimmy Hannigan will roll Herman Arpacker and Charlie Pagle in a special twenty-string match for a purse of $100. The first ten strings will be rolled at the Eglseton Square alleys next Monday evening, and the second ten at the Summer Street alleys next Friday evening.

IN what was practically a runaway, the Queen Quality five beat the Dorothy Dodd continent to a standstill in the final match of a five-game series for the championship of the Thomas G. Plant Company's factory. The match was rolled on their own alley before an enthusiastic crowd of one thousand scoters. The final score, which made it three straight for the Queens, being 1251 to 1413.

* * *

THE Queen Quality five is made up of the following: Martin Broderick and Al Davis, of the old City League; Henry Hoffman, Jack Henderson, of the Greater Boston League, and Charlie Pagle, who has been rolling such fine ball for the Eglseton Square team. The team is captained by Joe Spillane, the Beatty's old running mate. The team stands ready to meet all comers, either on their own alleys or on their opponents.

* * *

JOE SPILLANE and "Dutch" Wise will roll Eddie Grant and Bucky Holmes a ten-string match for a purse of $50 at the Bowlaway alleys, Somerville, on Monday evening.

* * *

CHARLEY MOONEY'S "Mystery Five" took Jack O'Hara's team of the Magoun Square League into camp to the tune of 1469 to 1425 in the first string the Mysterys secured the lead and had a good lead, but in the second O'Hara's team came strong and closed the gap considerably. The third string was full of excitement, but the brilliant bowling of Conroy, Mitchell and Chisholm of the "Mysterys" was too much for the barbers. Farrow, Rose and Dugan did good work for O'Gara's team.

* * *

THE Mystery team was composed of Charley Dolan of Neponset, Kane, Conroy, Mitchell and Chisholm of St. Augustine's Club of South Boston, while O'Gara, Farrow, Rose Dugan and Duncaster made up the opposition.

* * *

A SPACKER and Pagle recently defeated "Pie" Hartford and Eddie Dillon in a twenty-string match by eleven pins. Hartford is out for revenge and stands ready to take Jimmy Mahoney as his partner and wager $100 that they can defeat the crack Eglseton Square tandem.

* * *

YOUNG GRADY and Savage of the Magoun Square Bowling League are out with a challenge to Rose and Dugan of the same league. Listen to this from Grady: "They beat us once, and we beat them once. Now to settle who's the better team, my pal and I are willing to put up $100 and if they think well enough of it let them put up $100. If they don't accept we're going to claim the championship of the district."

* * *

THE Boston & Maine railroad all-star team claims the championship of Greater Boston at candlepins. This team has not been defeated this season, and will roll any team posting reasonable guarantees. Messrs. Tolman, McMennimen, Whelan, Dolan and Grant compose the team. Eddie Grant, manager, No. 21 Webster avenue, Somerville.

TENNIS STARS IN LONGWOOD PLAY

The second annual Invitation tennis tournament for the Longwood covered courts trophy in singles and men's doubles will be held at Chestnut Hill, March 24, 26 and 27, afternoon and evening.

The trophy was won by N. W. Niles in 1914. The holder each year must play through the tournament. In addition to this trophy, first and second prizes will be given in each event.

The following prominent players of the East have accepted the invitation, and will participate in each event: Richard Norris Williams, 2d, champion of the United States; M. F. Tonchard, indoor champion of the United States in 1912, 1914, 1915; N. W. Niles, Massachusetts State champion, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914; George M. Church, intercollegiate champion, 1914; Theodore Roosevelt Pell, W. M. Washburn, B. S. Prentice of New York; J. D. E. Jones of Providence, and J. Vezey of Montreal, Canada; G. P. Gardner, Jr., A. S. Palmer, Irving C. Wright, H. C. Johnson, K. C. Seaver, G. C. Caner and John S. Pfaffman, members of the Longwood Cricket Club.

and the recuperative power necessary. The men who succeed must be born strong and healthy, with nerves quick and serviceable in emergencies, with native intelligence, able to think swiftly and to the point, and cool-headed in predicaments which would throw an ordinary man into nervous convulsions.

All this, and more, is indispensable to a great league performer; but in addition he should have played ball from childhood up, and he must possess that unique gift which we recognize as baseball genius—mere talent and willingness will not make a Cobb, a Matty, or a Magee; these belong to a higher type. And such men cannot be generated by any known process; they must be discovered separately and by good fortune, like Kohinoors. Now, how shall Kohinoors be transformed into brilliants?

At nine composed of the best men in the world will be defeated by second or third best teams if the former are not and the latter are rightfully placed in the field. Stallings, deeply revolving and forever attentive, has got each of his nine where he belongs—in the position he was born for. Wa talk of specialists; the Boston Braves are specialists, each one, and the nine as a whole is a specialist nine; its specialty being the winning of championships.

Therefore, individually and in the aggregate, they shine like the chiselled and perfected Kohinoor, and nothing has been found to prevail against them. The nine is an organism, just as the human body is, and they work together on the same principle; the liver would be of no use in the stomach's place, and the function performed by the lungs would be beyond the skill of the kidneys; Maranville would be wasted in right field, and it would be a dangerous extravagance to substitute James as pitcher for Evers as second baseman.

How Stallings knows just where each of his men belongs, I don't know, and perhaps he himself would find it hard to explain; it is intuition, and proves at any rate that he is in his proper place as manager.

Get Together and Play the Game.

Here, then, are nine men (with a number of second string men), and the next question is, how shall they be physically trained to enable them to do their work with the greatest vim and certainty. One hard and fast system will not do for all, for each has his personal equation—his peculiar constitution and temperament; there must be, you might expect, as many different training regimens as there are men on the team.

It is easy to train a track team man; you become acquainted with his peculiarities and treat him accordingly, and you train him to his sprint or his weight put as the case may be; but a baseball man does several things in a game; at the least he must be able to catch, to bat and to run.

In an hour and a half's game a ball player has come pretty near doing as great a variety of work as did a contestant in the pentathlon of the old Greeks. He is an all-round man, and his training must have that in view as well as his temperament and constitution. It looks like quite a problem.

Probably various solutions have been tried in the past, more or less successfully. But all the great things are simple, and nothing else is more simple than the right way to train a baseball team. Two short and plain rules suffice; let the men get together and let them play the game. Nothing more than that is necessary; and would be likely to do more harm than good. Such is the ripest fruit of training experience in baseball.

It surprised me, and I asked Stallings whether he did not give them running practice and light gymnastics even? And whether they did not require a very carefully and scientifically selected diet? He shook his head, and the only exercise they need, and the best for them, is what they get playing the game; and as for training table, it's a useless extravagance. They can eat what they like; you see them!

We were sitting in the dining-room, and there were the men, grouped about several tables, taking their nourishment as fancy prompted from the ordinary hotel bill of fare. They ate just the kind of stuff you and I eat; nobody hindered them. No doubt, having a healthy and vigorous appetite after their work, they were apt to select the most nourishing viands available; they would not be satisfied with phipsyllabub and angel cake.

"But what about drink?" I suggested.

There were no silver buckets with champagne bottle necks sticking out above the ice; no green herbage of mint julep; no shrine of foaming beer; the young gentlemen seemed to be drinking plain ice water, perhaps the most dangerous beverage of all; but Stallings was not concerned.

"They take a drink if they want it," he said, "but if a man hasn't brains enough to know how far he can go, he hasn't brains enough to be in the Boston team."

Gives Them Skull Practice Twice a Day.

I didn't inquire about smoking, because I had seen the champions enjoying good cigars after a meal. As for sleep, they were supposed to go to their rooms at eleven, and to be up at seven. That was all.

"I give them skull practice twice a day—before and after the field work," the manager volunteered.

This does not mean the Pennsylvania kind of skull practice, which is hauling over the coals, sometimes; advice; warning; encouragement; a review of what has been done, and of its significance, and a forecast of what is ahead. It is, I believe, an innovation of this manager's. It keeps the students aware of what they are doing, and of what is expected of them.

It would be interesting to listen to this skull practice, but of course it is a private function, and even were outsiders admitted they could not report what they had heard. And this is basic training.

A lot of healthy, strong young fellows take every day three or four hours' active exercise in the open air, listen to good counsel, and otherwise do what they please. Ambition, mutual emulation, the rivalry of opponents, and brains or common sense are amply sufficient to restrain them from debilitating indulgence.

Their life is about what the life of all decent and sensible young men should be; the only exception-al thing is that, as has been said, they are picked men, with baseball genius. It is from such material, and by such regimen or lack of regimen that the champion players of the world are produced. But I had one more question.

"Do they keep in any sort of practice during the six months off season?" I asked.

So far as Stallings knew, or seemed to be sure, they did not. During vacation they were masters of their own time and amusements. There was no reason to suppose that they gave way to wild excesses, barring it over, it seemed to me that this manager had solved the problem of wise government; to inculcate good principles, and then to let the people as much as possible alone.

Don't fuss with them; don't nag them; don't spy on them; trust them; and if they prove untrustworthy, they incur their own punishment.

That is the way to handle a baseball team, and it may not be a too radical notion that it might turn out the best way to handle a nation. It might be a good plan to require that our presidential aspirants should go through four years of baseball management. Then elect the one who brought out the best baseball team.

The Braves, at the start of a season, may average 5 per cent overweight, or a trifle more. They will have worked that off in a month or two, and then go on getting quicker and more enduring for the rest of the time. By September, they will be perfected; and then let the team that would tackle them supplicate their gods for a miracle, for nothing less than that, I should think, would overcome the Champions of 1914.

As we all know, the Prodigal has returned, and was received with good-natured gibes and hearty slaps on the back. He is a vast but very boyish youth, glad to be here, and unable to explain what had allied him. His shoulders are so broad and his proportions so just that, standing alone, he does not betray his height; but another man standing beside him looks like a dwarf; even the gigantic Schmidt seems a moderate specimen.

He is active and quick as a rat terrier, and is likely to grow stronger as he gets older—he is but twenty-two—until at his best he will be one of the finest men in the world.

If his brain, at maturity, is anywhere near on a par with his body, Billy James will gain renown more enduring even than what belongs to a pitcher on the greatest baseball teams. But he must study the philosophy of Things as they Are, and avoid all Federal Leaguers.

Norwegian Girl Wins Women's Tennis Title

NEW YORK, March 20.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the Norwegian champion, won the women's national indoor tennis championship by defeating Miss Marie Wagner, the titleholder, 6—4, 6—4.

Mrs. Marshall McLean and Mrs. S. F. Wagner won the doubles. The pair of former titleholders defeated Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Florence Ballin, 3—5, 8—6, 8—2.

NEWCOMERS FOR CORNELL CREW

ITHACA, N. Y., March 20.—Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell oarsmen, is still undecided as to the makeup of his varsity combination. He has four or five eights at work on the rowing machines, but so far has not been able to reach any conclusion as to the final makeup of the varsity and junior varsity crews.

A glance at the material, however, would indicate that the Cornell Varsity eight of this year would be composed largely of new men. Only three who pulled oars in the varsity crew at Poughkeepsie last year remain at the navy—Welles, Elfins and O'Brien. Wellen has been rowing in what has been called the first varsity combination, and the other two have been rowing in the second combination. Whether Welles will be able to remain in the first crew is not yet known.

Certainly there will be a strong representation of last year's freshmen eight in the varsity crew this year. The first varsity combination today includes Collyer, Cushing, Worn and Lund from the cub crew of last year, while Morgan, Stahl and Myers of the same combination are rowing in the second varsity eight. Andrus, who stroked a gallant race for the junior varsity eight at Poughkeepsie last year, is also seated in the first varsity combination.

Allen, one of the most likely candidates of last year's 'varsity, and who was compelled to quit on account of illness, is also a very favorable candidate for the varsity eight this year.

Until the oarsmen get out on the inlet, however, and Courtney has an opportunity to size them up in actual rowing, no attempt will be made to bout a permanent varsity crew.

'Happy' Says Pitcher Mays Will Be Star

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 20.—Well, the big stuff is on the boards every day now—the old Regulars and the Yanks gang fighting it out till it looks like Fenway Park with the World's Series only two weeks off and one game to win the pennant. That first game—Bert Mitchell has told you about it—pretty near got my nanny. If I was in Boston, I couldn't tell you a thing about it. I lost my voice. Great stuff, kiddo, believe me. And say, did you notice what young Mays did. You know I was telling you two or three days ago about him.

HAPPY.

The kid pitches a fast, underhand ball. It goes like a shot and it hangs in the catcher's mitt like a—you know—them things the Germans had. When the batter sees it, that's all. The Yanngans got a couple of runs off Ruth, but Mays was there, all the time.

"OLD" SPEAKER ON THE JOB.

Old Tris Speaker was there on the job. He was picking them out of the air with one hand like they was daisies or something. And he got seven or nine home runs or something. Every time he come up to bat I'd shut my eyes and—bang—good-by ball. Him and Duffy Lewis have got the war beat to nothing at all for that sort of stuff.

Young Ruth, that came to the Sox last season, is going good, and the boss thinks him and Mays will help out like time this year.

Ray Collins and Shore pitched for the Yannigans that first game. Janvrin did the star hitting of the day with a triple and a single, and Hobby got two hits. There's the old boy that keeps a-talking all the time when he's in the game. He's not the old "pep" by the bushel. Me, I like to hear a ball player that's got something to say.

"Del" Gainer did some pretty hitting for the Yannigans, with a triple and a double; and he held down first base like he belonged there. Billy Sweeney was out around second. That old boy looks good.

BOB GILL A HUSTLER.

And say, this Bob Gill, he played third for the Yannigans in the first game. He's going to make somebdby hustle before he's much older. He's a hard worker, and fast and sure, and the boss likes them kind.

Speaker is getting better every day. I don't be surprised if he had his best year this year. That's the way they're all going, too. On their toes all the time, clouting the old ball forty ways, working the old thing up. Say, it sounds like the Fourth of July and a double-header with the Tigers, when they get going and us guys up in the bleachers get our voices working right.

TIGER PITCHERS IN POOR SHAPE

GULFPORT, Miss., March 20.—Manager Jennings is greatly worried over the poor condition of his pitching staff. George Boehler, probably the nearest ready of any of the twirlers, showed that he could not be depended on yet, and none of the others promise much. A message from Ty Cobb today asked where he could join the team at once, and Jennings ordered him to report in Mobile today. He is in condition and will take part in the two games there Saturday and Sunday.

NEW YORK GIANTS.

MARLIN, Texas, March 20.—Manager McGraw and the first team of the Giants has left for San Antonio, where the regulars will play today and Sunday. The rookies went up to Waco this morning for a couple of games with the club there.

JACKSONVILLE, March 20.—The Athletics batted Vaughan for fifteen hits in five innings, and won the last game of the series from the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 2. Lavender held them to two hits in four innings. The Cubs found both Bressler and Myers a puzzle.

BROOKLYN DODGERS.

DAYTONA, Fla., March 20.—Team 5 of the Athletics, which, however, lacked the world's series luster, was defeated, 18 to 7, by Brooklyn here. The Brooklyn recruit, Jeo Sears, made three singles and one double, walked once and was robbed of another long hit by Walsh's wonderful catch. The Dodgers hit Veltz and Hamilton freely.

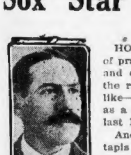
Wood May Get Tryout Today

Sox Star to Test His Arm



A. H. C. Mitchell.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 20.—The second week of practice for the Red Sox ends today. The pitchers and catchers have been at it for a fortnight, while the regular squad—Speaker, Lewis, Gardner and the like—have had only a week of the grind; five days as a matter of fact, as rain interfered with practice last Monday.

Another battle between the two teams is on the tapis today and if the weather warms up enough it may go the full nine innings.

The morning opened quite cool, but warmer and not so damp as yesterday, when the practice had to be cut short on account of the frigid atmosphere.

WORK VERY SATISFACTORY THUS FAR.

Reports from other training camps indicate that the weather has been just as cold in other parts of the South, so the Red Sox do not get any the worst of it.

The work here has been very satisfactory thus far. Everything is going along in an orderly manner according to schedule and there have been no mishaps to mar the work of conditioning.

It is possible that Joe Wood may pitch an inning or two today. Joe started off very well, but after about two days his arm began to give him some trouble. He believes it is coming around all right now, but he is going very slow with it. He has been drawing a fat salary from the club for the past two years and has not been able to give value received. He is a willing worker when fit and he is anxious to give the club some of the same kind of work that won the World's championship for the Red Sox in 1912.

Young Tutweiler can Throw with Either arm.

Batting practice continues to be the chief form of exercise down here. Carrigan is insistent that his men get all the stick work that is possible. All the pitchers work in turn—say ten or twelve minutes at a time—and with the big staff of hurlers on hand it can be seen that the boys get a long shift with the bat every day.

Guy Tutweiler, who has shown up so well, is strangely able to throw equally well with either his right or his left arm. He says he used to be a left-handed pitcher. Now he usually throws from the outfield with his right hand, but says he could do as well with his left.

"Bunny" Fabrique, the Providence shortstop, has arrived and reported to Manager Dave Shean. This increases the number of the players here to thirty-six, with more Providence men to be heard from.

Speaker Is Hitting at a Terrific Gait.

Duffy Lewis has found his missing trunk and he now dazzles the hotel lobby delegation with the many-hued waistcoats he owns.

"Nappy," King of the Newsboys, won a travelling bag by guessing the right number in a contest at the cigar counter. To show that he is an able citizen in a financial sense, he immediately offered the bag at auction and realized $4.50 on it.

M. F. Sullivan, the Boston "fan," who has been here for several days, has been called home on account of the Hecht building fire. It is understood he has some connection with the building.

Speaker's batting has been terrific since he struck camp. It looks as though this earnest and conscientious player would have one of the best seasons he has ever enjoyed.

"If Speaker was a member of the Detroit or Brooklyn clubs he would lead the league in batting every year," declared Heinie Wagner today. "In Detroit they give Cobb a base hit every time he reaches first. And they do the same thing in Brooklyn for men like Daubert and Wheat. That is what brings their averages up so high. In Boston the scorers do not give a player a base hit unless he really makes one. They score correctly in Boston."

Catcher Masterman Is Handling Himself Well.

Masterman, the Maine boy, has made a hit with the players by the clever manner in which he handles himself behind the bat. They predict a bright baseball future for him. He joined the Red Sox squad three or four years ago and acted with them three or four days. Then he became homesick and beat it back to the Pine Tree State.

Two New Cities Seek Eastern Ball Clubs

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 20.—Danbury and Waterbury have applied for admission to the Eastern Association. Miles H. Baker of New York made application for a team at Danbury, and Thomas F. Fogarty, president of the Jersey City Club of the International League, applied for the franchise at Waterbury.

President James H. O'Rourke refused to affirm or deny the report that Stephen E. Stoddard of New Haven, the polo player, had applied for the local franchise.

East Boston	0	2	0	1	0	3
Charlestown	0	0	2	0	1	3

The indoor track season will be brought to a close this afternoon when the seventh annual preliminary schoolboy games will be held at the South Armory, Irvington street, starting at 2 o'clock.

This year's meet is the biggest of the series, and it is predicted that it will be the best. Over 3,200 Boston schoolboys are entered in the events in three divisions—junior, intermediate and junior.

English High already has a fair lead as a result of the field events which were held Thursday afternoon, and this school is favored to win the chief honors.

English High scored a total of 31¼ points in the field events, Boston Latin 18, East Boston High 12 5-6, Dorchester High 12 1-2, High School of Commerce 10 5-6, Hyde Park High 5½, Mechanic Arts 5, Brighton High 3 and West Roxbury High 3.

HOT FIGHT FOR SECOND.

English High has many star athletes in all three divisions, so Captain Charles Morrill is not worrying about the final outcome of the games.

The fight for second place will be watched with interest, as several schools appear to have a fine chance of being the runners-up. High School of Commerce, Dorchester High, Boston Latin are all in a fight for this position.

The 1,000-yard run should be one of the feature events of the games. This event has a restricted number of entries for the first time and many stars will clash. Niles of English High is picked to win the event. High School of Commerce won the meet last season with a total of 103½ points.

RECORD GO IN TRIALS.

Two records were battered and two others equaled in the second day's competition, consisting of trials. The new marks are: 100-yard Junior run—Al Kroetzsch, 21 4-5 seconds; 220-yard intermediate, James Kelley of Commerce and Sam Flowers of English High, 28 seconds. Records equalled follow: Senior 600-yard run, Arthur Duffie, H. S. of Commerce, and Harold J. Brigham, English High, 1 minute, 24 4-5 seconds; 160-yard junior, F. A. Howlett, English High, and Langland, West Roxbury, 22 seconds.

Select Course for Jamaica Plain Run

The Jamaica Central Athletic Association will hold its annual ten mile cross country run over the following course on Patriots' Day, starting at 10 a. m. Centre street to Pearl, to Washington, to Ireland, to Hyde Park avenue, to Arborway, to South street, to Centre, to clubhouse.

Fifteen prizes will be awarded and entry blanks can now be had by addressing William Reddish, clubhouse, No. 308 Centre street, Jamaica Plain.

Kilbane Seeks Battle with Freddie Welsh

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 20.—Johnny Kilbane, after trimming Kid Williams, the bantam champion, is now after lightweight honors. He's not satisfied with wearing the featherweight togs. Today he offered to meet Freddie Welsh at any time or distance at catchweights. He said he believed Welsh would be easier for him than Williams was.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville

HORSTOP OF THE BRAVES

MACON, Ga., March 20.—The Braves will have the greatest catching staff in the big leagues this year. We were pretty classy behind the bat last season, but we will be even better fortified in this position during the coming pennant campaign. We have four catchers working out with a squad here. They are "Lank Hank" Gowdy, Bert "Moose" Whaling, Tragessor and Bruggy. These last two men are new comers, but at least one of them is sure to be retained by Stallings, while the "Big Chief" may decide to carry both of them along all season.

* * *

There is not any need for me to devote any space to discussing Gowdy. His deeds on the diamond speak volumes in themselves. I consider him the greatest catcher in the National League and his wonderful record in 1914 bears out my statement. The Columbus youth, however, will be even more valuable this year than he was in 1914. He knows more about the fine points of the game and will be able to coach his pitchers better, although he did a very fine job in this respect last season.

* * *

As a batter, well, what's the use of telling about Hank's deeds with the bludgeon. He's a natural born slugger and is sure to make things mighty interesting for the National League hurlers before the curtain drops in October.

* * *

One of the features of the training season has been the high class playing of Bert Whaling. When Whaling first joined the Braves, he was a sensation. He did better work behind the bat than had been seen at the Walpole street grounds in many years. Bert, however, was a product of the Pacific coast where it is Summer most all the time. Consequently the cold, penetrating winds of the Hub affected him a great deal. He contracted one severe cold after another with the result that his playing wasn't as good as it had been when he first showed in Boston.

* * *

Whaling "came back" last year when he became used to the Boston climate and caught many a good game of ball. He told me the other day that he is feeling better right now than he has since he joined the Braves. His playing here at Macon proves this to be a correct statement. He has been working at top speed all of the time and has been shooting the ball to the bases with great shape. He has also taken off quite a lot of weight and the young man who believe that "Moose" will be slow on the bases this year are due to be disappointed.

* * *

Tragessor and Bruggy are promising young catchers, and, as I stated above, at least one of them and possibly both will be retained by Boss Stallings. A major league ball club requires at least three high class backstops. Baseball is a game in which accidents often occur frequently. Catchers, in particular, are injured very often and a team must have plenty of competent extra men to fill in in such cases. Gowdy and Whaling did all the backstopping for us until late last year. Both men were then placed on the injured list at the same time and it was necessary for Stallings to send out a hurry call and get Fred Tyler. This youngster was kept busy during the closing days of the season, but has since been let go to the Rochester club of the International League.

Sports of All Sorts

EXETER, N. H., March 20.—George Lowe, captain of this years undefeated Exeter Academy hockey seven, has declined to stand for re-election. "Red" Martin, it is thought, will be chosen.

* * *

MONTREAL, March 20.—Joe Jeannette of New York earned the decision over Cleve Hawkins of Montreal in a ten-round bout here.

* * *

NEW HAVEN, March 20.—Hyder Barr, captain and left fielder of the New Haven nine of the Eastern Association, has been sold to San Antonio, Tex.

When "Raymie" Skilton, the 200-pound coverpoint of the Arena Hockey Club and the greatest defence man in this country, dashes down the Arena surface tonight in an assault on the B. A. A. goal, local hockey followers will see the beginning of a desperate hockey match unless all signs fail.

Big Skilton is heart and soul in this series. He still remembers the famous B. A. A.-International series of a few years back, in which he was a big factor in the Unicorn's defeat. Since that time Skilton was in the bad graces of the hockey powers of the B. A. A. and it was only a week ago that Coach Winsor stated that he could play against the B. A. A.

With the so-called bad lad, Skilton has a chance to make good against the Unicorn and he is doing his mightiest to turn the series in favor of the Arena team.

Skilton is not alone in the desire to win over the B. A. A. tonight. Every man on the Arena team is out for this game and one of the most sensational matches of the year ought to be the result.

The Arena boys have developed a telling passing game, which should offset the great combination work of the B. A. A. team.

The game will start at 8:30 instead of 8:15. The change is made so that out-of-town "fans" will have a chance to see the start of the game.

Poehler Handicapped 50 Pins but Wins

WORCESTER, March 20.—Paul Poehler, candlepin champion, defeated Carl Hedberg of Worcester by 16 pins after giving him a handicap of 50 pins.

Brookline Boy to Lead Exeter Team

EXETER, N. H., March 20.—Stephen Potter of Brookline has been elected captain of the Exeter track team, succeeding Rupert Radford, who was forced to leave school on account of ill health. Potter is the best high hurdler in Exeter. He graduates this June and will enter Yale.

Rivals Resume Relations.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 20.—The renewal of athletic relations between Brown and Dartmouth was inaugurated by a football game between gym teams of the two colleges, in which the Brunonians defeated the boys from Hanover, 35 1-2 to 18 2-3 points.

Braves Tackle Macon Today

Fitzpatrick Is 'Live Wire'

By JACK CONWAY.

MACON, Ga., March 20.—George Stallings' "billion dollar" ball club will entertain the young men who represent Macon in a little game of baseball here this afternoon. The Braves are traveling at a merry clip and are confident that they will batter their way through the Macon aggregation without much effort. And we believe that they will make good their boast.

The champions have started right in where they left off last Fall and are playing a fast, aggressive game of ball. They are fielding well, while they are smashing the ball to the distant corners of the ball park.

Dick Rudolph and Bill James may be selected to do the hurling in today's game. Both of these famous pitchers are in fine condition and should go to the post on April 14 prepared for another record-breaking campaign.

Macon Likely to Give Braves Good Battle.

Macon is represented by a strong nine. It is much stronger than the college teams which the Braves have played this year. Therefore, we should witness a little excitement before the dear old Southern sun sinks to rest beyond the Western hills.

The Regulars and Tanigans played another of their celebrated contests yesterday, and be it known that the first string men are today heroes around the hotel lobby, as they grabbed off the honors by a count of 8 to 2. The tussle only lasted six sessions, but this was long enough to satisfy the Tanigans, who were somewhat tired as a result of chasing the lusty wallops sent out by the honorable Regulars.

Boss Stallings was sporting his best smile today. There is a reason for George's joy, as Eddie Fitzpatrick, the new infielder secured from the Toronto club of the International League, has scored with a big bang. Edward is one swell ball player and, unless we miss our guess by a couple of city blocks, he will be a big help to the Braves in the coming pennant chase.

Fitzpatrick Real Live Wire Full of Fight.

Fitz is built along the same lines as Johnny Evers. He is not very large in stature but is a real live wire once he steps on to the ball field. He is very aggressive and fights for everything in sight.

The former Toronto star is not a ball player who gets into unnecessary disputes on the diamond, but when he has a rightful protest to register he does so with plenty of force.

In the field Fitz is as fast as lightning. He holds his position very gracefully and is able to throw accurately from every angle. He did not show very well in his first two days of practice. This was probably because he had not had a baseball in his hands since the International League campaign closed last Fall.

Inside, however, proved in yesterday's game that he possesses plenty of real class. He played second base for the ambitious Tanigans and was there in more ways than one. He made a couple of difficult assists, while he handled four putouts without an error.

Fitzpatrick Pleases Manager Stallings.

The new infielder made one of the best plays of the game in the third session. Herb Moran had singled and was enjoying himself around first base. Evers then hit sharply between first and second base. The ball was traveling at the 75-mile-a-minute clip. Fitz was right on the job, speared the ball, tagged Moran as he ran down the base line and tossed the ball to first ahead of the doughty little captain of the champions.

The dazzling play of Fitzpatrick has pleased Stallings immensely. Fitz will act as understudy to Johnny Evers and will be able to take his place in the regular lineup any time that the boss of Troy is forced out of the game.

We hope that Johnny will be out there at second base in each of the Braves' games, but baseball is crowded with unexpected happenings and if a club is to keep up in a fast pace fight it must be plentifully supplied with steady, experienced utility men.

Stallings continues to work Cather as third base for the Tanigans. He is anxious to have Ted get accustomed to playing this position so that he will be ready to perform at his best if anything should happen to "Rabbit" Smith.

Harvard, Yale and Tech Fencers Meet

Harvard, Yale and Technology will meet at the Harvard Club this afternoon in the semi-finals of the annual intercollegiate fencing tournament.

Their Married Life

Helen Overhears Some Decidedly Unpleasant Remarks About Herself

Copyright, 1912, by International News Service.

HELEN closed her eyes lazily, conscious that she was very comfortable and that there was nothing to bother her. Warren had offered to take Winifred upon the upper deck so as to leave Helen alone for a little while. The day was perfect, the third afternoon of their trip, and Helen, carefully wrapped up in her steamer chair, knew that she had only to open her eyes to see a blue unruffled sea with a sky almost cloudless.

Two women who had been strolling around the deck stopped near her and began to arrange the steamer chairs next. They looked at her curiously. Helen was conscious of this, although she did not open her eyes. One of the women had the stateroom next to theirs and the other sat near them in the dining room. Neither of the women was the kind Helen cared for, they were both too critical, too obviously overbearing, and both dressed elaborately. One was travelling with her husband, the other was alone, and had travelled a great deal from what Helen had heard of her conversation with others at different times.

Helen did not move, and the women, having settled themselves, began a conversation in a low-voiced mumble which came to Helen in fragments. She was not interested in what they said until the one, a Mrs. Trevor, said with a little laugh and quite distinctly:

"That's exactly what I think of her, but her husband is rather a fine looking man."

"The little girl is sweet," said the other, but let me tell you, my dear, that what the father says goes."

"What makes you say that?"

"Different things I have overheard. She doesn't dare assert herself—one of those meek, unassuming women, you know, and just the kind a man tires of very soon."

HELEN SURE NOW SHE IS BEING DISCUSSED

Helen was now fully aroused, and was quite certain that she was the subject of conversation. She remembered having denied something that Warren had said to her in rather a vehement way just the day before, and later they had discovered that their stateroom door was open, and a moment afterward Mrs. Trevor had tripped past, with a laugh and an arch little look in at them. Helen had flushed with embarrassment, and Warren had been furious, but she had forgotten about it until this conversation had occurred.

Of course the women thought she was asleep, and consciousness that she was overhearing what they were saying made her long to get up and go away, but if she did they would be sure to know that she had listened. It wasn't just the nicest thing in the world to know that people were talking in an unpleasant way and that she would have to stay and listen whether she wanted to or not.

"She dresses rather well," remarked one of the women after a little.

"Yes, but she doesn't show her clothes off to any advantage."

"That's true. Still, they must have money."

"Don't talk so loud, dear; it would be awful unpleasant if she should overhear anything."

"She's asleep. I was sure of that before we sat down."

"All right. Anyway, we haven't mentioned any names. I wonder where that steward went with the tea. I saw him downstairs about fifteen minutes ago." The conversation drifted into different channels after that, and Helen, the beautiful, lay all lost upon her, stirred and began to get out of her chair, acutely conscious that her cheeks were burning. Her one thought was to get down to her stateroom away from those curious eyes and those bitter tongues.

A book fell out of her lap as she stood up and she bent to pick it up. Then with the steamer rug over her arm, she made her way along the deck and downstairs to her room. The words of those women were still ringing in her ears. She was the kind of a woman men soon tired of, meek and unassuming. For the first time since they had sailed, vague misgivings assailed her. That note that she had been so worried about. Was it possible that Warren had actually tired of her, and was involved in some way with another woman?

If such a thing should ever happen, it would kill her she was certain. How real and terrible it all seemed after all, and yet in the excitement of leaving she had forgotten about it. Tears were beginning to gather, and with a little sob she threw herself in the berth and began to cry in a nervous way she had. This trip that had begun so beautifully and so unexpectedly was after all only a warding off of the blow for her.

WARREN SEES THAT SHE HAS BEEN CRYING

She felt as though she must know all about that letter or she would go crazy. Her head began to ache dully, and mechanically she dragged herself up and reached for her cologne. A light humming in the corridor announced the fact that Mrs. Trevor had gone to her room to dress for dinner. Helen looked uninterestedly at the little clock on the shelf over her wash basin. It was nearly half-past 5 and Warren would be coming down in a few minutes. Winifred would be sure to notice, too, that she had been crying. She must exert some self-control, no matter how great the effort to accomplish such a thing, and hurriedly rinsing a towel out in cold water she began to bathe her eyes.

Warren entered almost immediately, and in a way unusual to him, turned Helen around so that she faced him and put his finger under her chin.

"You've been crying," he said, surprise rampant in his voice. "What's wrong?"

"Nothing, dear." Helen was not good at dissembling. "Some women on deck were saying things. I overheard them."

"Things! What kind of things? About you?"

Helen hesitated, hardly knowing what to say. Somehow the sense of Warren's nearness banished the foolish fears that she had felt before. She had been foolish and over-sensitive.

"Yes," she admitted, slowly, "about my clothes and not showing them off."

"Pshaw—is that all?" I might have known it would be something like that. Stop that crying and get into something nice. That red dress will make them sit up and take notice. I've never known a woman to be sensible about anything yet."

Another incident in this entertaining series will appear here soon.

Up-to-Date Jokes

In a club in the West End of London there sprang up two factions. One criticized the manager because he did not provide the members with good meals, the other defended him. The dispute got fiercer and fiercer. Half the club wanted to fire the manager at once. The other half said he was efficient.

One day at lunch time a member asked a waiter: "Where's the manager?"

"He ain't here," replied the waiter. "He said he was going down the street to get something to eat."

"I mended the hole in your trousers pocket last night after you had gone to bed, Walter, dear. Now, am I not a thoughtful little wife?" said a young spouse to her husband.

"Well—er—yes, you are thoughtful enough, my dear, but how did you discover there was a hole in my pocket?"

From the Top of Her Crown to Her Toe

Republished by Special Arrangement with HARPER'S BAZAR, the Oldest and Greatest Woman's Magazine

AND the top that spring is going to be the absolute terrule of the last new parasol. And such parasols as we shall enjoy for the next eight months. The Woman Who Knows has already visualized the summer playground; she sees the grandstands a blaze of color, vying with the tops of the coaches, and great splashes of brilliant color dotted over the greensward.

The 1912 parasol would fill with joy the heart of the most aspiring colorist. Basket has never used color with a more generous brush than the makers of this summer's parasols. A single parasol would reflect all the tints of the rainbow, and yet so cleverly are they blended that there is nothing garish, nothing to offend the most fastidious of women.

It is a question whether we have improved upon the picture parasol of the Japanese maiden, but we have rung in several variations, all more or less amusing. The shape we have used in many ways. We have even Americanized it to the extent of using it for a conservative black and white striped silk. The effect is wonderfully good. The Woman Who Knows declares that she intends to carry one with her white linen and shantung suits.

Again we have made it of green silk, and on the inside have embroidered birds of many colors. There is the same flat shape, with many ribs, as in the paper parasol which in childhood's happy hours we carried with such pride over our heads that should have been filled with something more aspiring.

Another parasol, which might claim an Indian origin, has also many gores of widely irregular width, and this is developed in taffeta; one of the bright hues which the sun cannot dim, combined with striped silk. Silks, patterned in curious Egyptian and Russian designs and carried out in blues and reds, yellows and greens, are shirred into fluny gores, each tip ending in a great amber drop.

Even the black and white combinations have their touches of color. And one of the prettiest sun shades is the black and white striped parasol with a border of purple and white blocks, which Emmy Wehlen carries in "Tonight's the Night." There are parasols with covers of the plain colors—battleship gray, soldier blue, et cetera—so I am told, and perhaps you can find them, but the Woman Who Knows insists that she has no blindfold by the others that she did not see them if they were present.

Speaking of parasols, reminds me that canes must receive serious consideration. They are no longer subjects of ridicule for our friends, the joke makers, but a part, and not necessarily a minor one, of the trot-about costume. One of the best looking canes I have seen recently is the one picked up by the Woman Who Knows, and she delights in it because she can match her gown in the cover. And isn't there always a comforting, well-groomed air given by the accessories which match, that can be accomplished by no other means.

Miss Margaret Arbuckle made the longnette bridge take a second look through their glasses when she appeared one morning at Palm Beach carrying a cane from which apparently dangled a woman's leg. It was a clever bit of carving, for the leg was shapely, the ankle trim, and the foot long and slender.

If you would forget the snow and sleet and hasten the Spring by putting your thoughts on it, take heed for the morrow and prepare for yourself some linen blouses. You will want all you can lay your hands on for they will be the correct complement to the tailored suit this Spring. And the shops are going to charge a pretty penny for them with linen as scarce as it is today, and no more from poor Belgium for many a day. The severest and simplest models will have a little hemstitching as decoration, and perhaps tucks. Others will be elaborately embroidered.

ABOVE, little Miss Boston with her Japanese parasol—green, scattered over with birds of many colors. In the centre is a hat of black and white pussy willow taffeta on which is a branch of cherries, a muslin neckpiece outlined in black dots and a cane to match the frock. At the bottom, a black and white pussy willow checked taffeta hat and a line stock, ecru tinted, banded in black velvet ribbon.

ONLY the sun can eclipse in brilliancy the silk parasol shown at the top, patterned in red, yellow and green; also the black and white toque and the lacy side frill. In the centre is the dunce cap glorified into a creation of Milan and Georgette satin with a military veil; striped blue and white neckpiece and tan and black checked boots. Below, a leghorn hat, clouded in chiffon and gay with dahlias and a lace fichu.

Dreams That Win Success

The "Vision Splendid" Can Be Attained if the Dream Is Part of Our Being

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Whatever, Time, thou takest from my heart,
What from my life,
From what dear thing thou yet mayst make me part—
Plunge not too deep the knife,
Ax dies the day, and the long twilight gleams,
Spare me my dreams."

COLUMBUS had in his heart a vision of another world. He discovered it. Lincoln believed that "all men were created free and equal" in very truth. He banished slavery from his country.

Whoever has in his heart a dream may one day make it come true. Dreams are the promise of future reality. Visions hold the seed of achievement. If you dream of beauty you must sooner or later rouse yourself to realize at least some measure of it.

A block of marble would be nothing but a shapeless mass of cold whiteness if it were not in the heart of the sculptor to dream of the figure of loveliness that for him lies sleeping in what to us is only stone quarried from the mountainside.

The musician combines sounds we all might hear if only we were attuned to dream lovely harmonies as he is.

Poet, painter, philosopher, discoverer, inventor, healer—each of them has achieved because his mind beheld visions; because the dream of accomplishment was born and grew and came to fruition in his heart.

THE IDLE DREAMER

It is scarcely possible to be "an idle dreamer." The lazy individual who basks in the sun of inaction as idly as a pussy-cat is no dreamer. He is just a waster who is as capable of thought as is tabby. Whoever dreams, whoever visions beauty seeks expression. He longs to make his dream come true. He will work and struggle and endure hardship and privation so that his "vision splendid" may become a reality. One has only to be true to his dreams—to cherish ideals—to cultivate the music and poetry and longing for beauty and expression that stirs in his heart—to have the ability to accomplish some part of what he longs for.

Nothing great was ever accomplished without inspiration. And inspiration and dreams weave themselves into the simple tasks of life just as they do into its poetry and chivalry and great adventures. A mother who brings love to the trivial task of darning her children's stockings, will make the weaving softer and smoother than if she snarled her threads in angry impatience. There is a dream of love for her children in the true mother-heart—that dream uplifts work and makes it beautiful.

Inspiration may help you write a sonnet—or make a delicious strawberry shortcake. An salad dressing that is intelligently mixed by a cook who visions the perfect blend she aspires to have in the end is far better than one that is slapped together just to combine ingredients.

One can never help realizing the dreams of his heart. For naturally one gravitates toward what one secretly desires and loves.

REALIZE VISION

There are men and women who, to realize the Vision Splendid in their hearts, will endure darkness and trial and pain and want, who will travel far over rough roads because their Grail lies ahead. Such as these save our world from degeneration. They illumine work and suffering with faith, and they achieve.

What discoverer or inventor would have given up new continents or splendid forces to "fight up the dark" and make the arid places fertile; what physician would have been enabled to sterilize wounds or make surgery painless; what great deed of progress would ever have been accomplished without dreams?

Would we possess printed books to read, or warm houses to live in, or a chance to live without destroying and fighting for place, if there had not been visions in the hearts of some of those who have gone before?

There isn't a fine thing in all your life than your dreams. Your selfish, self-seeking wishes, your inordinate desires, are not dreams. But all the longings to know and know and see and do—all the visions of giving and working you have—all the poetry and song—all the willingness to illuminate sordid tasks and serve well, are indeed dreams. Make them come true!

Stories of the Famous

Some Little Anecdotes of Great Men

SHORTLY after Dean Inge was appointed to St. Paul's London, he administered a sharp rebuke to a garrulous young man who was criticising his appointment. Dean Inge is somewhat deaf, and the young man observed, "They have sent a lame bishop to Winchester and a deaf dean to St. Paul's."

"Yes," replied the dean, icily, "and it only needs a dumb layman to make it complete!"

"Some time ago, when I was playing 'Drake,' my box office keeper came to me in great perturbation," said Sir Herbert Tree.

"'I think,' he remarked, 'you ought to reconsider your bills outside the theatre.'"

"Why?" I asked.

"'Well, it reads to confusion,' he proceeded. 'At the head of the bill is printed, "Proprietor and Manager, Sir Herbert Heerbohm Tree," while among the actors you are simply described as "Herbert Tree." They think you are two different persons. A gentleman came to the box office after seeing "Drake" last night, and said:

"'"I want to buy more seats for tonight. That young Herbert Tree is a fine actor. I never could stand his father!"'"

During Lord Kitchener's campaign in the Soudan he became tired of having his messengers sniped by the enemy; he therefore ordered that a telephone wire should be laid across a certain stretch of desert. As Kitchener had ordered it, of course it had to be done, but there were many doubts expressed, for it was felt that after the enemy had got over their awe for this new device they would be sure to cut the wire, and the wire was cut several times. Kitchener never complained, he simply ordered the wires to be replaced. Later on the despatch riders learned to their intense surprise and admiration that he had caused the real wire to be laid underground.

OH, the foxiest youth of the lads I know
Is gossamer-winged Dan Cupid.
He shoots his arrow and twangs his bow,
And hits the mark—does Cupid.
All other lads are swift or slow,
All other boys seem stupid,
But still when courting these swains would go,
They follow Danny Cupid.

By this little chap are the big chaps led—
By little Baby Cupid,
Who lures them on till their "yes" is said,
And then away flies Cupid.
If he flies away when the wedding's sped—
Surprise is very stupid.
Since the King himself has never wed,
Why hope to alter Cupid.

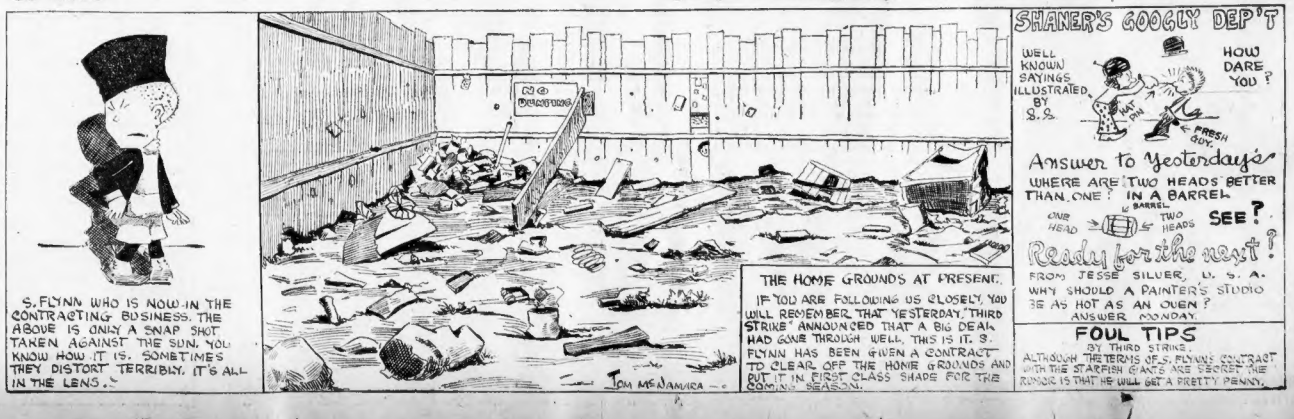
Spring's a-Coming, Boys—Just Give a Look at the Home Grounds



PAINT MEN URGE "BUY IT NOW"

"Buy It Now? No indeed. I have my money—I want solely first. I use hundreds of dollars' worth of paint and find a year from today it I take care of it and run no risks. To keep it in the bank for two per cent, rather than paint is to vitrolation.

"Now that kind of talk is what causes stagnation in business, makes unemployment, keeps wages high, and puts clients into every merchant trying to create confidence and consequent prosperity," says George C. Morton, of the Carpenter, Morton, Whitaker Paint Company. "I believe nearly everyone has money to spend on the thing he or she really wants more than anything else. Most New Englanders need now is the spirit of progress and faith in the future as well as in the future. Our sales for March are running 40 per cent. above March of last year, and we expect even better for April. A number of stockkeepers in various cities have given the same testimony.

Mr. Morton is chairman of the New England Clean Up and Paint Up week, which comes the second week in May. He says that the activities all over New England that are preparing to wage war against dirt is never before.

"Begin now is my advice," says Mr. Morton. "All who expect to clean up and paint up could start too early to please the community. Present weather looks good to me. Why not begin at once?"

He stated the painters are interested in early sales, and I am glad to say that dozens of retailers are already beginning to get in their spring supply of paints in order to be ready for the great week.

"When a man paints his house, barn or fence, he does a good deal more than simply buy paint. Before the thing is or can well waste time on the raves, new sills and slats for blinds, some bricks and mortar, and maybe paint brushes, overalls and cleaning materials. Above all else it means that those who get the paint and money will be expended—more than in buying the materials, which is the end to unemployment. When the laboring man has wages he can buy paint and more paint—and so the business circle continues until it is wheel, belt and gears roll right along.

"The Clean Up and Paint Up campaign, which is to have a meeting in City Hall this evening, we will notice and we recommend 'Buy It Now.'"

Join California in the Celebration of Orange Day

Buy and Eat Oranges—Get the Orange Habit, for It Means Both Health and Enjoyment

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Today is Orange Day. California, which celebrates it with special festivities, invites the whole nation to join her.

In the Eastern States the celebration consists only of buying oranges and eating them, and inviting other people to eat them.

It is a celebration which will benefit everyone who takes part in it. Millions of people eat oranges daily. Those who do not had better learn to eat them, for there is no fruit that is more healthful—none that is more delicious.

After a long Winter, when fresh vegetables have become scarce and high in price, when apples are withering, and when grapes are to be found only among the expensive hothouse products, the orange supplies the greatest need of the human stomach.

It is an acid fruit, but containing plenty of easily digested sugar. It is satisfying to everybody—not an acquired taste.

And because California has specialized in growing it for many years it is of superior flavor and extremely cheap.

Years ago, when seeds made the eating of oranges a trifle unpleasant, the horticulturists educated the orange trees, and the orange trees, learning intelligently, began to grow oranges without seeds.

That is the kind of oranges that come from California now, seedless and with little of the weight and substance devoted to rind. Nearly all good, wholesome food is the California orange, and so digestible is it that invalids and infants can take it when their stomachs will rebel at anything else.

As for children, a dozen oranges, eaten through the day, will not harm them. There is no fruit of which a child can safely eat so much.

California has thousands and thousands of acres planted in great orange orchards bearing fruit with which the nation is supplied when other fruits have gone.

The most scientific methods of growing and shipping are employed. To the valleys where there is little water the clear mountain streams have been brought by great irrigation ditches, so that the swelling fruit on the trees may be made plump and firm with abundance of pure water.

Although the fruit is naturally protected from dust by its bright golden skin, it is further protected by the shipper, who wraps it in paper as soon as it is taken from the tree.

Over the plains and mountains great orange-laden trains move daily, bringing the fruit of the great Western State to the people of the great Eastern States, a gift to the nation that would earn California a high place in the people's esteem if she produced nothing but oranges.

If you go to the Panama-Pacific Exposition you will see the oranges, with the bright golden fruit shining through the glossy green leaves of the trees—trees that are always green Summer and Winter, but which are especially beautiful when the ripe fruit illumines the branches like the glowing globes on a Christmas tree.

If you cannot go to the exposition you can help celebrate the day. Get your oranges and eat them today. Buy the biggest and best ones you can find, for those will be the California oranges.

Thus you will help a great State in a big celebration and form a habit that will help you toward health and happiness.

SONG

By JANE M'LEAN

I AM the soul of life,
Out of the noise and strife
Of sordidness, I rise
And color all the skies
With gold. I am the thrill
That wakens in the still
Pale souls that lie asleep,
Forgetting how to weep.
I have known pain, and yet
Full soon do I forget
In living, there appears
Joy's presence through the tears.
And those who know me best
Feel what I bring, unrest,

He Thinks He Owns It Again

He Thought the Same Thing Once Before, but He Learned His Mistake

Many Children Unfitted for College Education

Parents Should Take Into Account Temperament and Ambition of Boys and Girls Before Spending Time and Money in Effort to Make Them Scholars

By DOROTHY DIX

IN a certain family of limited means there are a boy and a girl who have just graduated from high school. There is money enough to give one or the other of these young people a college education, and the parents are anxiously asking which one shall it be.

Shall John go to Harvard and Mary stay at home and wash dishes? Or shall Mary go to Wellesley and John go to work?

Of course, it is only within the last few years that such a problem could have vexed any family council. If there was money enough only to send one child to college, there would have been no arguing on the subject. The boy would have gotten it. But the world has come to see now that a woman has quite as much need of an education as a man has, and that a daughter is even quite as likely to have a career as a son is. Therefore, the question of sex must be eliminated in deciding the matter.

It seems to me that the answer to this conundrum of whether the boy or the girl shall be given the college education is very simple. It is to give the one who has the most definite ambition the education that will help him or her to best realize that ambition.

Ambition and Temperament Must Always Be Considered Carefully by Parents

Also the child's temperament must be taken into consideration. There are plenty of children who have a head full of good, hard, horse sense, but who lack what we call book sense. They are hopelessly unliterary, and you can no more make scholars out of them than you can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

One of the most pathetic things on earth is the sight we continually observe of parents in meagre circumstances slaving themselves to death, and sacrificing every comfort, in order to send boys and girls through college who are constitutionally incapable of acquiring any education above the three R's.

All that these boys and girls ever bring home with them from college are a college yell, a sorority pin, swelled heads, and the habit of loafing. A tragic price has been paid for such junk, and it's a pity that parental affection prevents a man and woman from sitting down and coldly sizing up the mental ability of their children before they make their heroic offering to the fetich of a college education.

There's John, bright as a new dollar, quick as they make them, capable and alert, the first to catch on to every new thing, but who never reads a book if he can help it, and whose only interest even in the daily papers is in the comic pictures. What is the use in sending him off to college? He's the kind of a boy that will get his education in the great school of life. He'll get his knowledge of mathematics from account books and ledgers. He'll get his philosophy from experience. In the end he'll know more than any college professor, but he'll get it through the sweat and toil of living, not from printed pages.

It is my firm belief that unless a boy is going to be a professional man it is a handicap, and not a help to him, to send him to college. The four or five years that come just after a boy has left high school are the formative ones of his life, and they should be put in on learning the rudiment of whatever business or trade he is going to follow. For proof of this, observe that 90 per cent. of the successful merchants and business men you know went to work from the high school, and had no college education.

As for girls, why should her parents sacrifice themselves to send little Fluffy Ruffles to college? One look at her peaches and cream complexion, and the way she rolls her eyes at men, shows that nature destined her to write Ma before her name instead of M. A. after it.

On the other hand, if a boy is a scholar by nature and instinct, if from his childhood he has evinced a strong bent in the direction of any of the professions, his parents should move heaven and earth to give him the very best possible education that they can. There are men who are scientists in their very cradle; men who play at doctoring and surgery when they are nothing but kiddies; men who are painters, authors, actors from their youth up. These have a well defined ambition and their parents should help them realize it if they can.

Girl More Interested in Browning Than Beaux Should be Sent to College.

And precisely the same may be said of girls.

The studious and ambitious girl, the girl whose thoughts are centred on a career instead of beaux, and who is more interested in Browning than she is in the latest cut of skirts, has a right to a college education if her parents can possibly manage it.

If there is a choice between sending a bookworm girl and a baseball boy to college, give the girl the preference, because she will make the most out of her opportunities. That's the whole question in a nutshell, not what the college can give us, but what we can take from it, and, as a matter of fact, we all do get just what education we can assimilate.

'Tom' Lawson in Vienna(?) We ASKED Him Whether Dreamwold Is for Sale

OUR Cablegram Merely Mentioned MARRIAGE, and Yet the Lawson REPLY Is at Hand, Touching on Matrimony, Cleopatra, the late Queen of Sheba and ONE MILLION DOLLARS! We Shall PRINT Mr. Lawson's Unique Cablegram Tomorrow in the Sunday AMERICAN. Tell Us What YOU Make of It.

A certain reporter in the financial district is a model of perseverance.

Wherever he goes, this young man is bumping into friends.

Occasionally, his friends give him tips; NEWS tips. Being a young man of experience, he is extremely shy of the other kind, the "good thing" tip of the financial district.

A month or six weeks ago, gentlemen in State Street—young gentlemen, middle-aged gentlemen, old gentlemen—were continually backing our young friend into corners to tell him, "privately and confidentially," of a rumor that "Dreamwold" was ABOUT TO BE SOLD.

This report, if true, would make a bully story. "Dreamwold" is the dream-come-true estate of Thomas W. Lawson at Scituate. Mr. Lawson is a millionaire many times over. He wrote "Frenzied Finance" and "Friday the Thirteenth." For many years "Tom" Lawson was the Peck's Bad Boy of the financial world.

In State Street, the Dreamwold rumor was quite as important as if you had said that the City of Providence had bought Bunker Hill Monument, or that "Charley" Waldron had leased the Old State House from the Elevated Railway Company, and would dedicate it to high-class burlesque.

To print a rumor of this importance, affecting Thomas William Lawson, without having first queried Mr. Lawson about it, would be like writing to the newspapers that one of Mr. O'Meara's officers had threatened you with arrest in Harvard Square. It would be almost as bad as picking out a railroad bridge, with the Flying Yankee due in twenty seconds, as the place to read the current number of the Atlantic Monthly.

So, the reporter set out to "find Lawson and put it up to him."

First, naturally, he tried the Lawson offices, in State Street. He tried them again and again, day after day.

Mr. Lawson was "not in." He was "out of town." Nobody could just say WHEN he might be expected to return.

The man with the tip finally approached a Bostonian who is said to be in the confidence of the Master of Dreamwold.

"Try Oregon," said Lawson's friend.

He "tried Oregon," therefore, and lo! back came a telegram from "McSweeney."—E. A. McSweeney, the efficient Lawson secretary—saying that Mr. Lawson "is in Vienna."

"Ask him by cable, my expense," the reporter telegraphed to Oregon, "if it is true that he is offering Dreamwold for sale." Incidentally, the cablegram inquired as to the rumor that he was about to marry a wealthy widow.

Mr. McSweeney cabled—Vienna.

Nobody really expected so astonishing an answer—least of all Mr. McSweeney—but here it is, in the office of the AMERICAN and on the desk of the Sunday editor. You shall see it in all the Sunday editions tomorrow.

Mr. Lawson's answer is brief. Tolls are high from Vienna to Boston, and the financier was merciful. Worthy of the author of "Frenzied Finance," however, is this characteristic Lawson cablegram.

It speaks of MARRIAGE, vaguely.

It mentions the QUEEN OF SHEBA, who, in the language of the day, was "some queen."

It speaks of CLEOPATRA, the original vampire, who made a monkey out of a great war lord 1951 years ago and who considering the fact that she reigned long before Mr. Fears began to make soap, was on the whole not unattractive.

Something is said further in the Lawson cablegram about a Lawson gift of $1,000,000 to charity, to be distributed through the Boston AMERICAN.

The latest "Tom" Lawson story will be printed in full tomorrow. It will be strikingly illustrated. It will discuss, remember:

1. Lawson.
2. Marriage.
3. The Queen of Sheba.
4. Cleopatra, who was "no lady."
5. $1,000,000.

Tomorrow's edition of the Sunday AMERICAN will be further remarkable for its discussion of the Great War:

"If the Allies Win," by Ferrero, the great historian.

"If Germany Wins," by Bernhardi, famous general of cavalry and author.

"Italy's Stand," by D'Annunzio, noted poet and philosopher.

"The Defence of the Rhine," by Hilaire Belloc, foremost military critic in Europe.

It is quite impossible to be NEUTRAL about the war unless you are INFORMED about it. The best way to be WELL informed on the subject is to follow the discussion of European affairs in the Sunday AMERICAN, from week to week, by experts like Ferrero, Bernhardi, D'Annunzio and Belloc.

So far as the newspapers are concerned, it is admitted, we believe, that the BIG feature of the baseball training season is the Julian Hawthorne articles from the camp of the Braves, at Macon, Georgia. See Mr. Hawthorne's story tomorrow.

Nobody can TELL the boys of New England how to pitch, but masters like James, Rudolph and Tyler CAN "show" them. This is the treat that awaits every boy who reads tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

"Curveless Bill" James, by the way, promises to be no longer curveless. William has developed a twister SO puzzling that nobody has yet been able to suggest a satisfactory name for it. 'ANOTHER story from Macon, by Jack Conway, describes the curve of curveless "Bill."

And "news"?
REGULAR news?
The very, very LATEST.

The Sunday AMERICAN will tell the story of the LATEST Saturday night happenings up to 3 a. m.
